Tension mounts as Ford visits Japan

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

TOKYO (UPI) — Protected by the tightest security this nation has seen since World War II, President Ford arrived in Japan on the first leg of a Far East trip today amid student riots and a threatened nationwide protest strike.

Dressed in a blue suit and blue shirt, Ford appeared tired when he stepped off Air Force One at Haneda Airport with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger after a grueling, 16-hour flight across many time zones.

His welcome was staid and highly controlled by security considerations —a 21-gun salute, a red carpet and a carefully selected crowd of 2,500 Japanese and 150 Americans on the spectator deck, many of them waiving Japanese flags.

"It was a sunny day, and I believe that was a good sign for my trip as the first American president to visit Japan," Ford later said of his arrival. "The welcome was warm and friendly and I look forward to seeing more of the Japanese people."

But security prevented any handshaking or speech-making. Instead, Ford was taken quickly from the tightly guarded airport by helicopter to an ornate, European style guest house in central Tokyo.

There he dined with Kissinger and staff and retired early in preparation for his meetings Tuesday with Emporer Hirohito and Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Ten minutes before Air Force One set down, a band of 1,600 students from an ultraleft political group clashed violently with police at a park two miles from the airport. Police arrested 176 of the students, raising to 188 the number of persons placed in custody as the result of protests against Ford's visit.

Some 3.35 million Japanese workers from 59 unions have called a protest strike Tuesday. About 260,000 employes of government-controlled Japan National Railways will halt service for 12 hours and trains on the country's privately owned railroads will be idled all day by a walkout of 230,000 employes.

Despite the protests, Ford understood his five-day Japanese visit as a show of good will and sources said the President expected to extend an invitation to Hirohito to visit the United States in 1975.

Preparing for subsequent stops in South Korea and Vladivostok, where Ford will hold summit talks with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, Kissinger told reporters aboard Air Force One that the chances are better than 50-50 that the United States will sign a 10-year treaty limiting offensive and defensive missles with the Soviets by next year.

Reception for Ford: everyone gets locked in TOKYO (UPI) — Members of Japan's parliament who attend a reception for President Ford Wednesday literally will be locked in the same room with him.

They won't be able to leave, even to go to the bathroom, according to sources close to officials in charge of the unprecedented security arrangements for the president's visit.

The reception at the luxurious Okura Hotel across the street from the U.S. Embassy is being called "Operation Canned Goods" by Tokyo newspapers, because of the stifling security system.

Members of the Diet, the Japanese parliament, who are going to the affair have received two separate printed invitations. Each guest will have to present both of them before being allowed to enter.

In addition, a team of selected Diet deputies will be at the door to identify personally every deputy going in.

Ford will walk through the Okura to the reception in a special passage set aside for his use alone. All doors leading into it will be locked and guarded for several hours before the reception starts, and even hotel employes will be barred from it.

LAND OF THE RISING SUN

President Ford shades his eyes from the sun on arrival at Tokyo airport today. He was met by Ushiba Nobuhiko, former Japanese ambassador to the United States, who is gesturing toward a crowd of 2,600 on hand to welcome Ford. Ford is the first U. S. President ever to visit Japan.

Major tax reform plan abandoned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee today abandoned hopes of widespread tax reform this year and moved toward approval of a smaller bill increasing oil company taxes by at least $2.5 billion and giving some relief to lower income taxpayers.

Speaker Carl Albert promised to push the bill to the House floor if the Ways and Means Committee approved the bill Tuesday as planned.

Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., outlined the smaller bill to the committee today in its first meeting since the election recess, and there was almost no opposition.

The only major question appeared to be whether the committee would end the 22 per cent oil depletion allowance immmediately on Jan. 1 as Mills wants or would phase it out over a two-year period as in a bill previously approved by the committee but not considered by the House.

The bill as proposed by Mills and which apparently will win committee approval has four parts:

—End the oil depletion allowance either on Jan. 1, 1975, or phase it down to 15 per cent in 1975, 8 per cent in 1976 and zero in 1977. North Slope oil from Alaska and small producers producing less than 3,000 barrels of oil a day would continue to get a 15 per cent allowance through 1978.

—Grant $2.3 billion in low income tax relief by increasing the minimum standard deduction for the very poor from the present $1,300 to $1,600 for individuals and $1,900 for couples. The standard deduction for all taxpayers would remain at 15 per cent of income, but the deduction ceiling would increase from $2,000 to $2,500.

—The foreign tax changes in the larger committee bill would remain in this bill with one minor exception relating to withholding of foreign income.

—Hard-pressed utility companies would get relief through an increase from 4 per cent to 7 per cent in their investment tax credit.

Viet vet bill too inflationary: Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford told the lame duck session of Congress today he would veto as inflationary a veterans bill raising benefits for Vietnam-era servicemen if it is sent to the White House in its present form.

In a message sent to Congress while he was traveling in the Far East, Ford also asked for fast action on dozens of measures, including confirmation of Nelson A. Rockefeller as vice president, a 5 per cent income tax surcharge and emergency aid for the unemployed.

The lengthy list was delivered to congressional leaders at the opening of a post-election session of the 93rd Congress. A fifth of the congressional members will not be back when the new Congress convenes in January.

Senate leaders Mike Mansfield and Hugh Scott indicated Congress would accomplish virtually none of the things the President asked except for the Rockefeller confirmation.

Almost all of Ford's requests, including his 31-point economic package, had been sent to Capitol Hill earlier but they have not yet cleared the timeconsuming process of debate and compromise.

Greyhound bus strike looms today

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — More than 16,000 Greyhound bus drivers, terminal workers, and maintenance and office employes in 48 states are expected to walk off their jobs today unless a wage settlement is reached quickly.

Round-the clock negotiations were held during the weekend between management and union representatives in an effort to avert a strike against the Greyhound Bus Lines before a contract extension expired at 11 a.m. PST.

Federal mediator Guy Parent said continuous negotiations began Saturday, and after more than 24 hours of talks, "significant progress" was being made. Parent did not detail what areas were still under contention.

Greyhound employes have voted 11,606 to 816 in favor of a strike unless a settlement is reached.

Parent said the negotiations were "more complicated than ever because for the first time the parties are working out a nationwide agreement."

"We are hopeful that a settlement can be worked out and an agreement signed that will protect the best interests of all concerned," he added.

Donald Rhodes, secretary of the union's joint bargaining committee, said earlier that "no specific progress" had developed halfway through the weekend bargaining session.

He said, however, that both sides had presented 'silght revisions" of offers made before the talks broke off Oct. 24. The weekend talks were the first since then.

Previous contracts with Greyhound had been negotiated on a division basis, but all the divisions were consolidated June 1 into the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Divisions. The Council now represents 30 unions.

Jaycees can ban women, keep tax exemption status

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today let stand a lower court ruling that the U.S. Jaycees can continue to bar women from membership while maintaining tax-exempt status and receiving federal funds.

The justices declined to hear appeals challenging the men-only membership rule in Jaycee chapters across the country.

Chapters in Rochester, N.Y., and Philadelphia voted to admit women and were expelled from the national organization.

Both chapters brought suit in Oklahoma, where the national Jaycees is headquartered, contending that the organization either had to admit women or start paying taxes and stop receiving federal funds.

The suit was dismissed in district court on grounds the Jaycees were not using federal money to discriminate when they worked on drug rehabilitation programs, prevention of child abuse and a variety of other projects.

The district court held there was not enough "state action" or involvement to force an end to discrimination.

Chino youth dies in quick draw contest with his pal

Two 13-year-old Chino boys visiting near Mariposa first tried shooting at tin cans with a rifle and pistol. Later, they decided to play a game of "quick draw," authorities said.

The second game cost one of the pair his life — even though the weapon was supposed to be empty by that time.

William Ned Samuels III of 12316 Third St., Chino, died of a gunshot wound of the stomach shortly after the incident Saturday in a guest home owned by Bill Reagan of Mariposa.

According to Mariposa County sheriff's deputies young Samuels and a companion, David E. Farkas Jr., 13, of 5019 Roosevelt St., Chino, were visiting the Reagan family in Mariposa. The two boys earlier had been shooting at tin cans with a .22 rifle and a .22 pistol. They went into a guest house and began playing a game of quick draw when the rifle held by Farkas discharged. The bullet hit young Samuels in the stomach. He died later in a Maripso County hospital.

Sheriff's officers said that the shooting was accidental, as the Farkas youth did not know his rifle was loaded.

Oil firms violating anti-trust laws: Cory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Controller-elect Ken Cory said today anti-trust actions should be filed against seven large oil companies for allegedly monopolizing the crude oil market in California.

Cory said the corporations prevented competition and "violated" all their contractual responsibilities to the state" by controlling pipeline networks and forming cooperative drilling and exploration ventures.

"There is such a degree of intercompany cooperation in crude oil marketing as to make a mockery of the free enterprise system," said Cory, a Democratic Assemblyman from Garden Grove, who chaired the Joint Committee on Public Domain.

Cory released a committee report accusing seven oil companies of violating both state and federal anti-trust laws.

The seven were Standard Oil of California, Mobil, Union Oil, Atlantic Richfield, Exxon, Texaco and Shell.

As controller, Cory will head the state Lands Commission, which controls leases to oil companies on state-owned lands. He said the companies owed the state "at least $170 million for past and present violations."

The committee report said the companies, called "majors," rely "on access to other majors' pipelines."

"In short, it is fair to say that there is one pipeline network in California, pieces of which are owned by the major oil companies," the report said. "The majors have free access to the entire system, but can exclude independent producers and refiners from the system at will."

Fog expected to retreat as dry winds move in

Clear skies tonight and sunny and warmer weather Tuesday will follow a cold front that brought cool temperatures and shrouded valley communities in dense fog this morning.

Forecaster Ron Hamilton of the National Weather Service said dry northwest winds are pushing the cold front from the area. Clear weather is expected tonight and temperatures Tuesday should be about four degrees warmer with a high of 72 degrees.

The maximum temperature in Pomona Sunday was 67 degrees followed by a low this morning of 50 degrees.

Ontario International Airport closed operations and delayed some flights from 7:45 to 8:30 this morning because of the heavy fog. An airport spokesman said no planes were diverted this morning.

Government raises new alarm on marijuana use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government today raised new health questions about marijuana use, saying that test results so far are inconclusive but there is "cause for concern and caution."

The Health, Education and Welfare report said the scientific evidence is hardest on the effects of marijuana smoking on driver performance.

"A definitive evaluation of marijuana's harmfulness or safety for humans cannot be offered at this time on the basis of scientific evidence available," said Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of HEW's National Institute on Drug Abuse, which prepared the report.

"But there is cause for concern and caution based on evidence from animal studies and some preliminary human studies summarized in this report," DuPont said.

"For now it would seem the possible adverse effects should lead marijuana smokers or potential smokers to question whether it is worth the risk."

The report, completed early this year, was delayed to include new research which raised more questions about the potential health effects of marijuana smoking.

"Whatever the ultimate evidence of more serious consequences of chronic cannabis use, there is little question that acute marijuana intoxication interferes with immediate intellectual functioning as well as with driving and other psychomotor skills," DuPont said in a foreward to report.

The report was released just three days after DuPont called for decriminalization of private use of marijuana.

The report said evidence continues to mount that marijuana affects auto driving ability, especially as the amount smoked increases. It has been found to increase both braking and starting times, to adversely affect attention and concentration abilities and to detract from performance on attention tasks involved in driving, the report said.

The most recent studies included in the report raise questions about the effects of marijuana on male sex hormone levels, interference with the body's disease-resistent response and effect on fundamental cell metabolism.

One series of animal studies indicates that one of the active ingredients of marijuana — delta-9-THC — and possibly other ingredients have a potentially harmful effect on cell metabolism which could disturb basic biological processes and interfere with the body's immune response, the report said.

However, it added that no human research has been reported which demonstrates that disease resistence is significantly impaired by marijuana use.

Another series of pre-clininal studies, also termed "speculative," suggest that THC delays rejection of skin grafts in rats and inhibits the growth of tumors in mice.

"Whether this suggests a possible future usefulness of THC in human organ transplant surgery, and in the treatment of human tumors, is also purely speculative at this time, awaiting further extensive research," HEW said.

Stabbing incident following party hospitalizes man

A stabbing incident that left an Alta Loma man hospitalized Saturday night following a large party in the area of 19th Street and Amethyst Street in Cucamonga.

Kenneth Donald Green of 7156 Hellman Ave., Alta Loma, this morning is listed in serious condition at Kaiser's Fontana Hospital with three stab wounds of the back. Eight sheriff's deputies were dispatched to a loud party in the area about 11:20 p.m. When the deputies arrived they reported that large numbers of adults and youths were leaving the area.

As deputies were breaking up the remainder of the party, Green came staggering across Amethyst Street saying that he had been stabbed by someone as he was getting into his car. Green could not identify his assailant.

3 youths held for theft of car, beating woman

Three Pasadena youths, arrested early today for curfew violation by La Verne police, wre found to have beaten up a woman earlier and stolen her car, officers reported.

The youths, 14, 15, and 17, were arrested in the 1000 block of Foothill Boulevard just before midnight. A few minutes later officers found the car abandoned at 2510 Golden Hills Road. It had been damaged heavily when it hit and snapped a utility pole there.

When it was learned that the car had been stolen in Pasadena, police connected the three youths to its theft and the attack on the owner. The three suspects were turned over to Pasadena police for prosecution.

At top, he swims toward his instructor, and at bottom, he seems to be trying to raise himself out of the pool all alone. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Boragine.

Shooting victim, 20, reported satisfactory

A 20-year-old Chino man was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at Chino General Hospital after being shot in the back in a shooting incident outside of the Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Chino early Saturday morning.

Ralph Anthony DeLeon of Chino, according to Chino police, was standing with a group of men outside the church's recreation hall at Third and D streets in Chino about 1 a.m. when a car containing several other men drove by and opened fire with rifles and handguns.

Police said approximately eight shots were fired from the car moving west on D Street. The group of men standing near DeLeon ran for cover. DeLeon turned to run to an alley and was hit in the lower right back by one of the bullets.

DeLeon said after the burst of gunfire, the car containing two and possibly more men drove off at a high rate of speed and turned north onto Monte Vista Avenue. The car was only described as a dark sedan, police said.

Detectives this morning said no motive for the shooting has been determined, but it may have been related to rivalry between Pomona and Chino city youths. Detectives said they are questioning possible witnesses to the shooting incident this morning.

California obscenity law to be reviewed by court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether California's obscenity law conforms to the standards established by the high court in 1973.

The court will consider the issue in a case involving seizure by Buena Park Police of the film "Deep Throat" when it was being shown at the Pussycat theater in November, 1973. The case will be heard later this term and decided by written opinion.

A special three-judge federal court in Los Angeles found the state statute unconstitutional. California appealed.

The panel's decision came on June 4, 1974, before the theater owner, Vincent Miranda, had been named in a criminal complaint. The timing was an important factor, since federal courts, under earlier Supreme Court decisions, may not interfere with state criminal procedings except under the most unusual circumstances.

The panel decided it could grant an order for the return of the film when no prosecution was pending.

Shortly thereafter, the Supreme Court dismissed another case bearing on the constitutionality of the California law— the lawsuit which generated the new 1973 standards and was back before the justices for a second look.

State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger contended that this dismissal took care of the California law once and for all. In a supplemental opinion, the panel found to the contrary.

Buena Park police seized four copies of the film at separate times when the theater persisted in showing it, as well as all the ticket proceeds each time. The money—about $5,000 in all —has been returned.

The panel found the law does not specifically define the sexual activity which prohibited as obscenity and therefore does not give "fair notice" as to what the law permits or bans. It found unsatisfactory an analysis of the statute by a state appellate court in another case.

L.A. considers finance program for elections

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A pilot plan to reform the financing and operation of municipal elections using public and private campaign funds will be considered Wednesday by the City Council.

City Attorney Burt Pines drafted the plan which, if approved by the council, will be tried out next spring in the 5th District. Voters will elect a councilman to replace 3rd District Supervisor-elect Ed Edelman.

The program requires each candidate submit a 300-word statement of qualifications to the city clerk —and to join him in opening a special trust account which will serve as a repository of all funds, public and private, collected for the primary campaign.

Forty-five days prior to the election, voters would receive an election packet containing candidates' statements of qualification and a $2 voucher.

The voucher would be returned to the City Clerk for credit, from the public funds, to the candidate indicated.

Private contributions for each candidate during the primary election would be limited to $75,000.

The top two vote-getters in the primary would each receive $40,000 from the city treasury for the runoff election. No private contributions would be permitted in the runoff.

Boy stabbed after dance in satisfactory condition

A 15-year-old San Dimas boy, stabbed Friday night in an apparently unprovoked attack after a school dance, was reported in satisfactory condition today at San Dimas Community Hospital.

Phillip Lemel told sheriff's deputies that neither he nor a 15-year-old companion, was involved in the trouble between Mexican-American youths and Anglos at the dance at Ramona Intermediate School.

But, the youth said, he and the other youth were attacked by three youths while they were walking at the Fordland and Ghent avenues just before 10 p.m. Phillips was stabbed in the stomach but his companion escaped injury. Their attackers fled on foot.

Sherrif's Sgt. Patrieck Shields, who is handling the incident, said the three youths being sought are Mexican-American between 14 and 16 years old. He said the attack apparently was result of a "spillover" of hard feelings from the incident at the dance.

State jobless rate heads for 9.3%--McCarthy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy says the unemployment rate in California could reach 9.3 per cent by next August.

The San Francisco Democrat said Sunday he based his prediction on a report by the UCLA Economic Department.

"There are more than 800,000 people unemployed in this state that we've got to get back to work," he said.

The speaker addressed the first annual congress of the communities of the Outer Mission Organization. The gathering attracted more than 300 persons.

Woman delivers baby, kills mom, keeps tot

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Police have accused a West Philadelphia woman of using a pockeknife to perform a caesarian operation to deliver a baby, then shooting the mother to death.

Police discovered the body of Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, 26, buried beneath the kitchen floor of Mrs. Winifred Ransom's home on Saturday, about three days after she was killed.

According to police, Mrs. Ransom, who said she could have no children of her own, first met the victim at a millinery store several weeks ago. The two women became friendly and Mrs. Sweeney, who was in her eighth month of pregnancy, visited the suspect at her home on Wednesday.

Homicide Lt. James O'Neill said Mrs. Sweeney took along her 18-month-old daughter, Tammy, who was later found abandoned in a stationwagon. The child reportedly fell aleep on the sofa in Mrs. Ransom's home.

O'Neill said Mrs. Sweeney then said she felt ill and went upstairs to lie down. She was followed by Mrs. Ransom, who knocked her unconscious, and without training, took out a pocket knife and successfully performed a caesarian operation on the woman.

When the infant girl was born, Mrs. Ransom allegedly beat and shot to death Mrs. Sweeney. She then, with the help of her nephew, Robert Bullard, 27, buried the body under the kitchen floor.

Police said Mrs. Ransom confessed the murder to her common-law husband, John Ransom, after originally telling him the child was hers. Ransom then informed police.

Mrs. Ransom was charged with murder, conspiracy, possessing an instrument of crime and recklessly endangering another person. Her nephew, Bullard also was held.

Police said Bullard drove Tammy to a North Philadelphia location where she was found by police.

The newborn infant, who was found alive and well in a bedroom in Mrs. Ransom's home, was taken to Philadelphia General Hospital.

Arrest 3 men for gun attacks on motorists

Three young Pomona men were arrested late Saturday night, accused of the shooting at two motorists in Pomona.

The three, Brian Abernathy, 19, 1365 Ballerina Place, Ronald Douglas Hyde, 25, 267 S. White Ave., and Donald Bruce Hyde, 22, 265 S. White Ave., were arrested in the 800 block of Williams Street by police who said their car matched the car used in the attacks.

Police reported finding several molotov cocktails in the men's car in addition to a BB gun.

Victims of the incidents were Thomas Taylor, 48, Claremont, whose car window was shot out at Fourth Street and White Avenue, and Michael J. Smith, 17, Diamond Bar, whose window was hit and whose car was struck by something thrown from the other auto. That occurred at Holt Avenue near Dudley.

The three suspects were booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, possession of firebombs and throwing objects at an auto.

Man accused of trying to run over officer

A 20-year-old Chino man was booked in the West End Jail this morning after allegedly attempting to run over an off-duty highway patrolman with his car in the area of Phillips Boulevard and Ramona Avenue in Chino Saturday night.

Jammie "Frank" Bushere was arrested at his home at 12965 13th St., Chino, and booked in the jail on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon on a peace officer.

According to sheriff's deputies, California Highway Patrolmen C. E. Richardson and A. G. Roberts were enroute to work in a private vehicle when they attempted to pass a car on Phillips Boulevard. The CHP officers said the car would speed up and slow down, prevenring them from passing.

The two CHP officers, who were in uniform, said they stopped at Phillips Boulevard and Ramona Avenue. According to the officers the suspect made a U-turn and as he approached, recognized their uniforms and sped up. Officer Richardson said he had to jump out of the way of the moving vehicle.

Deputy Sheriffs Toby Tyler and Elwood Cousins drove by just as Richardson jumped out of the way. Deputies chased the car a short distance and lost it. Later, deputies checking a license number went to Bushere's home where the suspect was arrested.

Supreme Court upholds council against Yorty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today refused to block attempts by the Los Angeles City Council to force former Mayor Sam Yorty to turn over documents regarding his relations with Occidental Petroleum Corp.

The justices rejected Yorty's appeal of a decision by the California Court of Appeals which said the city council could subpoena papers in Yorty's possession relating to the sale of city land to Occidental.

Yorty had earlier testified before the council about the land sale and his stock ownership in Occidental. The council then subpoenaed papers, including letters between Yorty and Occidental board Chairman Armand Hammer.

Yorty refused to comply with the subpoena on grounds the council had no subpoena power and that the subpoena was too broad, violating his rights of privacy.

Youthful burglary suspects arrested

Two 15-year-old Ontario youths were being petitioned to juvenile hall this morning after they were caught running from the M and P Liquor Store at 939 W. Mission Blvd. in Ontario with a bottle of wine taken in a burglary.

The two youths were apprehended by Ontario Police Officers Ronald Scragg and Gus Hjertstedt patrolling in the area of the liquor store about 3 a.m Saturday. The officers reported seeing the two youth's running from the store with something in their hands and gave chase. On returning to the liquor store the officers found the front window of the door had been shattered. One of the youths suffered a cut wrist during the chase or burglary.

WALK FOR THE HUNGRY

The Rev. Leland Wilson, pastor of the La Verne Church of the Brethren, was in good walking form Sunday as one of 1,800 participants in the Pomona Valley Council of Churches' "Walk for the Hungry" over a 10-mile valley route.

Walk for Hungry raises $29,319; 1,800 take part

The Pomona Valley Council of Churches' "Walk for the Hungry" Sunday attracted over 1,800 participants and raised a total of $29,319 in pledges.

Proceeds from the event will be used to help feed the world's starving through CROP, a program of the Church World Service.

The Very Rev. Msgr. William Berry of Our Lady of the Assumption Cathoic Church in Claremont topped all participants in the 10-mile event with pledges of $1,000. The Claremont church also had the most participants in the walk.

The La Verne Church of the Brethren walkers collected the largest share of pledges for one church.

Ralph Waite, who plays the father on the television show "The Waltons," also took part in the walk and spoke at the opening ceremonies at Palomares Park in Pomona.

Of the 1,800 participants, about 20 ran the full 10 miles, including four in less than one hour.

The Rev. Leland Wilson, pastor of the La Verne Church of the Brethren, said that the event was one of the best interdenominational activities ever held by valley churches.

The FBI and privacy

No more secret FBI harrassment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General William B. Saxbe says the government must watch the FBI to make sure it never resumes secret activities directed against domestic groups like those it conducted in the 1960's.

Saxbe, who releases a Justice Department report today detailing FBI abuses ordered by the late J. Edgar Hoover, said there is actually no way to be sure the FBI won't resort to such tactics again. But he said such practices would not be tolerated during his tenure.

"It won't happen again while I'm here," Saxbe said during a televised interview Sunday (NBC's "Meet the Press").

Saxbe was referring to activities outlined in the report that show Hoover ordered a 15-year campaign of harassment against domestic radicals.

The report describes abuses —such as planted news stories and "anonymous" letters to employes and credit agencies against members of target groups —which both Justice Department and FBI officials termed "practices which can only be considered abhorrent in a free society."

Saxbe said he thought a repetition of government ordered snooping and disruption could easily happen again.

"To say these things could never happen again just is not so. You could have Watergate happen again. You could have all these things happen again if the people, the Congress and everybody concerned aren't interested," he said.

"I certainly think the price you have to pay for this is eternal vigilance."

The existence of the counterintelligence program, codenamed "Cointelpro," has been publicly known since radicals found evidence of it during a burglary of an FBI office in Media, Pa., in March, 1971, but details have been kept secret.

The program was directed against radical groups, blacks extremists, the Ku Klux Klan, the U.S. Communist party and a succession of new left groups.

Top secret IRS probes of 'enemies' confirmed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Previously secret documents show the Internal Revenue Service compiled dossiers on 11,000 potential Nixon White House enemies, according to a Ralph Nader-sponsored research group.

It was not known whether the government has destroyed the documents.

The Public Citizens' Tax Research Reform Group disclosed Sunday it had obtained 41 IRS files on the subject after a year of trying, including the threat of a lawsuit against the federal tax agency.

The Ralph Nader-affiliated group circulated copies of some of the documents to support its conclusion that there were "3,000 groups and 8,000 organizations targeted for top-secret investigations by the IRS ... under a plan instigated in 1969 by the Nixon White House."

It released a partial list of organizations targeted for special investigation by the IRS between 1969 and 1973, including the National Council of Churches, Americans for Democratic Action, the John Birch Society, the Congress of Racial Equality, the United Klans of America, Inc., the Founding Church of Scientology and the Urban League.

Former White House counsel John W. Dean III first disclosed the existence of a politically motivated IRS investigative effort when he testified before the Senate Watergate committee in 1973.

IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander subsequently abolished the "Special Services Staff" that conducted the controversial investigations, and one of the IRS documents said the questionable files would be destroyed.

The research group said the IRS' own audits determined that all but 22 per cent of the 11,458 intelligence files should be destroyed, and the group tried to find out whether they had been.

"In a Nov. 8, 1974, response to a recent tax group inquiry as to the disposition of the old Special Services Staff files, the Justice Department's chief litigation attorney stated that 'it would be inappropriate to reply to this request in the context of the present action,'" the tax group said in a statement.

The group said the IRS documents show that "top IRS officials," pressured by the White House to begin investigating potential political enemies, met on July 2, 1969, "and decided to set up a special task force which would collect information, establish files and key-punch the information" for inclusion in computerized IRS files.

Schools and privacy

Beginning Tuesday you can see all records

By United Press International

The Family Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, a little publicized law passed by Congress, takes effect Tuesday, much to the displeasure of American colleges and universities.

Under it, college students will for the first time have the right to see their own files, including confidential documents previously available only to school officials. Parents of elementary and secondary school students have the same right, with regard to their children's records.

The law slipped almost unnoticed through the 93rd Congress, which is still in session, and its impact on educational record-keeping at elementary and secondary schools and colleges was not felt until well after it was signed into law in August.

University administrators say the new law will have derogatory effect on admissions practices which rely on candid appraisals of potential students. Faculty members also have opposed the law, arguing they will be unable to write frank evaluations if the letters are eventually to be read by the students.

Some university officials complain they have received inadequate guidance from federal authorities, making it difficult for them to understand or cope with the requirements of the new law.

"Boston University is going on the assumption that everything in the files that was kept confidential before the law takes effect will remain confidential after Tuesday," said BU spokesman Jack Starr.

Northeastern University officials late last week said they had decided to hold up all student requests for access to records prior to receiving regulations from the U.S. Office of Education.

But no such regulations appeared forthcoming.

"We have nothing to say at this time about the law," said a spokesman for Health, Education, and Welfare Secretary Casper Weinberger. HEW officials said Thursday they will monitor implementation of the law, but do not expect to take an active role in enforcing it.

A spokesmen for the Office of Education said late last week that in the absence of federal regulations, "universities will have to rely upon their own interpretations of the law for guidance."

Harvard University officials last week admitted removing confidential information from school records to avoid releasing documents to students. Harvard is now being challenged by three students who have filed requests to see their records, and who claim the removal of information is illegal, "violating the spirit and intent" of the law.

Mideast war nerves

Situation tense but holding at borders

Israeli gunboats today shelled a suspected Arab guerrilla sea base in southern Lebanon from which it said guerrilla frogmen had tried to infiltrate into Israel, the Israeli military command said. Diplomatic intervention by the superpowers eased tension between Israel and Syria, reported close to war this weekend.

Tension remained high on the Golan Heights and Israel said it would keep its troops on a war alert until Syria agrees to let U.N. truce observers remain on the cease-fire line when their mandate expires at the end of the month. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar reported today Syria had decided to let the U.N troops remain —but would ask certain conditions.

In London, qualified diplomatic sources said only intervention by the United States and the Soviet Union appeared to have prevented a fifth Middle East War. But the diplomats said the superpowers succeeded only for the moment and that the same Arab-Israeli problems remain.

Israel was concerned both with tension on the Syrian frontier and the possibility of Arab guerrilla raids from Lebanon.

Rerun of last winter if . . .

Mideast conflict could upset domestic energy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton says the nation would be in the same "fix" as last winter if another Arab-Israeli war broke out and caused a reduction or cut-off of oil imports from the Middle East.

Morton, who was interviewed on CBS "Face the Nation" Sunday, said short term supplies of oil "are at an all-time high."

But, he added, "very frankly, there is little that we can do in the very short term to get better prepared than we were before. We are in the same fix that we were before..."

President Ford said in an interview with U.S. News and World Report that he is considering controls on fuel allocation if voluntary efforts fail.

Ford said it will become clear as the winter progresses if voluntary restraint is working.

"If we have an oil embargo obviously we have to take very stern measures," he said. "If we don't have an oil embargo but we have a bad winter, we may have to take some pretty strong measures.

"If we have a light winter and no oil embargo, I think we can probably get along without any tougher measures than we had before," he said.

Ford said the possible courses of action include reducing oil imports by more than 1 milllion barrels per day and arbitrarily allocating petroleum products between industry and users of motor vehicles.

In other energy-related development:

—Industry and government sources say most of the fuels Americans need for the winter, with the exception of natural gas, are in adequate supply.

—Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., proposed a plan that would impose a tax on automobiles that get low gasoline mileage and reward owners of thrifty vehicles with cash rebates from the government. He also suggested abolishing the Federal Highway Trust Fund and using the money to support mass transit programs.

Democratic governor's conference

All delegates cite inflation as major target

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (UPI) — Democratic governors, meeting in the aftermath of the Democratic triumph in the general elections, called upon Congress Sunday to begin tackling the problem of inflation immediately.

Arriving on the eve of the Democratic Governors Conference, Gov.-elect Hugh Carey of New York told reporters "The people want politics put aside and the country put back to work."

California Governor-elect Edmund Brown is not attending the conference.

Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, chairman of the newly expanded 36-member conference and the winner of a second term for himself Nov. 5, said, "The American people made it very clear that the ball is in the Democratic court.

"I feel very strongly that in the next six weeks the Democratic leadership should pass specific bills that deal with inflation and other problems in this country," Anderson said at a news conference Sunday.

Their words signalled an air of deep concern that seemed out of place in the affluent atmosphere of the conference site —a sandy playground of beaches, golf courses and tennis courts. Both Anderson and Carey, early arrivals, expressed a sense of urgency that Congress, also controlled by Democrats, had to move quickly to deal with the nation's problems of inflation and unemployment.

Carey, who remains a congressman from Brooklyn, for another six weeks before becoming the first Democratic governor of New York in 16 years, said he was going back to Congress to act as a "lobbyist" to prod the party leadership to act now, instead of waiting for the even heavier Democratic majorities to show up for the 94th Congress in January.

Greek elections

Conservatives gain control

ATHENS (UPI) — Premier Constantine Caramanlis, who scored a runaway victory Sunday in Greece's first free election in a decade, said today that Greek relations with NATO will depend on the alliance.

Caramanlis spoke to foreign newsmen in the lounge of the Greek Parliament as he prepared to begin political consultations in hopes of swearing in a new government by Wednesday.

Caramanlis withdrew Greece from the military branch of the alliance last August to protest NATO's importance in preventing Turkish troops from occupying 40 per cent of Cyprus in the wake of a Greek-led coup that overthrew President Archbishop Makarios.

Despite the wave of anti-Americanism that followed amid charges of Central Intelligence Agency involvement in the coup, Sunday's elections dealt a severe blow to the left.

The anti-American Panhellenic Socialist Movement led by former University of California Prof. Andreas Papandreou polled a disappointing 13 per cent of the vote followed by 9 per cent for the United Left Communist coalition.

Caramanlis' sweeping victory, even in the large urban centers of Athens, Piraeus and Salonica, prevented such popular artists as Melina Mercouri and Mikis Theodorakis from winning seats.

Nixon ready for examination

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Nixon is ready to be examined by three court-appointed physicians to determine whether he is physically able to testify in the Watergate cover-up trial, a spokesman says.

A Nixon spokesman said this weekend the former president has no objection to undergoing an examination by a team of doctors appointed by U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica.

"There's never been any question about that," the spokesman said. "Of course, they (the doctors) are welcome to examine him."

Nixon's attorney, Herbert J. Miller, told Sirica Friday he would fly to Nixon's oceanside villa during the weekend to confer with his client about the exam, and would try to have a response by Tuesday.

The spokesman said Miller talked with Nixon by telephone.

GOP wins Alaskan governor's race

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — Final unofficial totals in the Alaska governor's race show Republican challenger Jay Hammond defeated Democratic Gov. William A. Egan by 487 votes in the Nov. 5 general election.

After a laborious hand count of 60,000 computer ballots, Dorothy McKenzie, state elections director, released the unofficial totals over the weekend.

They showed 46,322 for Hammond, a poet, conservationist, and former state legislator from Naknek, and 45,835 for Egan, the three-term governor.

The State Elections Canvass Board meets Monday to begin checking the number of votes cast in the precincts. If the votes cast exceed the number of registered voters, the precinct will be recounted.

Wilbur Mills were riding, touching off a minor scandal. She says the publicity aided her career which accounts for her $3,000 weekly salary in Boston. Mills overcame publicity and won re-election in Arkansas and will retain his powerful House Ways and Means committee chairmanship.

Voters sent message to Congress: do something about rising prices

Editor's Note: Following is the first of five daily dispatches this week examining major legislative issues awaiting action next year, and how the new, more liberal 94th Congress is likely to deal with them.

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the voters sent a message to the heavy new Democratic majority they elected Nov. 5 to the next Congress, it was this: Do something about rising prices.

The problem is visible in the marketplace to everyone, from congressmen to ditch diggers. Inflation is climbing at an annual rate of about 12 per cent, and there is no relief in sight.

To combat inflation head-on, Congress has no real weapon except to order "nuclear economics," which means wage-price controls.

Economic controls rub against the grain of free enterprise, the heart of the capitalistic system. Congress has little stomach for controls. Business, organized labor and the White House are adamantly opposed.

Republicans oppose controls almost to a man. So do a large number of Democrats. The AFL-CIO's George Meany protests that without the "massive bureaucracy" which nobody wants, controls tend to hold back the working man's wages but not business prices or profits.

The first time the controls issue came to a vote, Democrats marched to Meany's tune.

Last May 1, the Senate rejected a proposed extension of presidential power to control the economy by a vote of 44 big liberal guns up for reelection this year, were Democrats Birch Bayh of Indiana, Alan Cranston of California, Thomas Eagleton of Missouri and George McGovern of South Dakota.

Controls might seem to be dead, except for one thing.

Higher prices are scaring everyone —rich, middle class and poor —and the solutions seems to be evading all the experts. The White House finally has agreed that the economic slowdown is really a recession, but that doesn't stop the upward climb in prices and unemployment. The worldwide drought and the specter of mass starvation foretell even higher food prices.

If these trends linger through the winter and into spring, 1974, the pressure on Congress to act may become irresistible.

Already, Democrats are scoffing at President Ford's anti-inflation "WIN" program —spending cuts, higher taxes, business tax incentives, voluntary food and fuel conservation —as inadequate.

Controls are dramatic, direct, immediate.

As usual, the Democrats are marching to different drummers. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield pumps for economy-wide controls "as needed." House Speaker Carl Albert says the Democrats "have no mandate" to order controls. Senate Democratic Whip Robert C. Byrd predicts the 94th Congress will pass "standby" controls, giving Ford authority to impose them where and when he sees fit.

This is certain: If Ford reverses himself and asks for control authority, the politics of the situation is such that Congress will be compelled to give him all he seeks. Much will depend on how the economy behaves in coming months.

Texas enrollmen

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — There will be 221,100 new first graders in schools throughout Texas this fall, according to the Texas Education Agency.

Total public school enrollment is expected to reach 2,805,300. In addition, there will be 78,700 children enrolled in public school kindergartens.

Stray bullet fatal to man

SEDCO (UPI) — A 69-year-old resident of this Lake Elsinore community was fatally wounded by a stray bullet Sunday, according to Riverside County sheriff's deputies.

John P. Garrett was found by his wife, who at first thought he had suffered a heart attack. Later it was determined he had been shot in the chest.

Deputies confiscated several rifles from some junveiles who had been target practicing nearby, but made no arrests.

Hang glider crash kills man

SAN PEDRO (UPI) — A Buena Park man was killed in a hang glider accident at Point Fermin Park here Sunday.

Authorities said Louis Schendeldorfer, 23, leaped from a cliff in the park and a gust of wind sent the glider he was piloting into the rocks on the face of the cliff.

A fire department helicopter airlifted Schendeldorfer to Harbor General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Officials said Point Fermin is a popular spot for hang gliding, and has been the scene of other such accidents.

9,000 gallons of oil on freeway after accident

COMPTOM (UPI) — A Long Beach man was charged with felony drunk driving after the car he was driving reportedly swerved in front of an oil tanker truck, causing 9,000 gallons of oil to spill on the Long Beach Freeway early Sunday.

The California Highway Patrol said Daniel S. Heinrick, 33, apparently swerved in front of the truck as he was changing lanes. The truck overturned, spilling the oil. The freeway was closed for six hours as transportation department crews sanded the roadway and vacuumed up the oil.

Heinrick and the driver of the truck, 26-year-old David Wolsten of Buena Park, suffered only minor injuries in the accident.

Ford official favors end to pot penalties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top Ford administration drug abuse official said today he favors an end to criminal penalties for personal use of marijuana while still pursuing a policy to discourage its use.

"The social goal of our marijuana policy is not to discourage use," said Dr. Robert L. Dupont, director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Programs.

He made the remarks in a speech prepared for the annual convention of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws tonight.

He told the NORML Convention —a group organized to decriminalize marijuana use and possession —that the federal policy "of relying exclusively on law enforcement to arrest both users and sellers has been replaced by a policy which targets law enforcement on the drug distribution system and not on the users of illicit drugs."

The federal government, he said, was closely watching the so-called Oregon experiment, where possession of marijuana is a "civil violation" instead of a criminal violation, much as a parking ticket.

Weakness in NATO

New clout for Spain in U.S. negotiations

The weaknesses of U.S. NATO allies in the Mediterranean have given the Spaniards new confidence in negotiations for a renewal of the agreement giving the United States the right to use Spanish naval and air bases.

Equally, the rise of leftist power in Portugal, the overthrow of the Greek government and a political stalemate in Turkey have given pause to United States negotiators who also must consider the possible early passing of the aged Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The agreement between the two nations goes back to 1953 when the United States won from Spain the right to use three American-built air bases and the naval complex at Rota near the entrance to the Mediterranean.

In exchange the United States promised military and economic aid to Spain. Since renewal of the agreement in 1970, U.S. aid has come to about $1 billion.

The fall of Portugal's rightwing dictatorship and the increasing leftwing influence on the new Lisbon government is known to be a matter of concern to U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Recognizing this concern, it is said the Spaniards may be willing to offer a site in the Canary islands if the Portuguese political situation should make the American base in the Azores untenable.

On their side, the Spaniards reportedly are asking a full defense treaty putting them on equal footing with U.S. allies in NATO and for increased economic aid to help offset a recession which is spreading to Spain from the rest of Europe.

Other issues involve Spain's demands for the return of Gibraltar from Britain and her desire to get into the European common market.

The United States has remained aloof from the latter two issues and on the first has made no promises of aid in the event of an attack on Spain.

Entering into negotiations also is the attitude of Spaniards themselves toward the U.S. presence on Spanish territory.

On the military side there is the belief that the presence of U.S. military aircraft on the air bases and of atomic submarines at Rota increases the danger to Spain without proper U.S. guarantees.

On the political side there also is a difference of opinion.

Spanish leftists feel the United States is helping to prop up a fascist regime under Franco which they hope to eliminate upon Franco's passing.

Conservatives who long have opposed the present agreement now are said to be changing their opinions, hoping the Americans will be a stabilizing influence when Spain moves from the current autocratic regime to an uncertain future.

And for over-all success of negotiations the Spaniards count heavily upon the upheaval on Cyprus, a general antiAmericanism in both Greece and Turkey which threatens U.S. mobility in the eastern Mediterranean, and the everpresent possibility of a renewal of war in the Middle East.

Health News...

If You've Had An Accident Stop, Think and Act Wisely

By DR. W. P. HELZER, D.C.

Whiplash neck injuries are among the nation's fastest growing health problems. Why?

Dr. Wes Helzer D.C.

The ever increasing number of automobiles rolling onto our congested streets and highways, the mass migration to the suburbs, and increased speed of our freeway systems, power brakes and more powerful engines all contribute to the growing frequency of the type of accident that can result in whiplash neck injuries.

But in one sense, a whiplash can be a blessing in disguise.

You see, a whiplash is by its very nature a problem for the modern Doctor of Chiropractic. He best understands the whiplash injury and is best equipped to cope with it. Consequently we see many new faces who visit us because of our reputation in dealing with the whiplash.

In our examination and care of these people we often discover that whiplash is but one of their problems.

Don't misunderstand me, the whiplash is in itself a most serious injury that can cause arthritis, migraine headaches, extreme nervousness, or many other problems.

This, of course, means that the whiplash injury cannot be left untreated. It will only be that 'blessing in disguise' if the person who sustains the whiplash comes in for a thorough examination and is treated effectively.

If our preliminary exam reveals the presence of pressure on the nerves in the upper part of the spine and the possible displacement of vertebraes we know that a condition can respond to the proper effective treatment.

I might add, that after the first effective treatment, it is not uncommon that a whiplash sufferer will have a first restful sleep since an accident.

Every accident victim should have a thorough modern chiropractic examination.

It is indeed apparent that a person who has had an accident owes it to himself and his family to have an examination to find out for sure. Since every health problem has a cause it's obvious that the cause must be found before a person will get well.

(Note: Dr. Helzer maintains chiropractic offices at 108 East H Street, Ontario, telephone: 983-1711).

AERIAL BALLET — A group of humming birds perform an aerial ballet as they enjoy the sugar syrup dispenser of Mrs. Betty Doty of Salinas. Mrs. Doty, however, may cut down the birds' supply because of the rising price of sugar. It takes 2½ cups of sugar to fill the feeder four times a day.

Should survive growing pains

School averts young tribal war

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (UPI) — For a few weeks early this fall, the campus of the government's Intermountain School promised to become the battleground for a teen-aged version of the great Indian wars

Night after night, students at the Indian boarding school battled it out with fists, rocks and bottles between the squat, austere buildings which once comprised Bushnell Army Hospital.

There were injuries, arrests, convictions—police cars were damaged and firebombs and knives confiscated.

The whites on the school staff and in the surrounding farming community of Brigham City were scared. They called the campus a "tinderbox," and predicted the worst was yet to come.

But it was a war which failed to survive its early skirmishes.

Today, the vast, colorless campus is quiet, pastoral and the fear in the white community has been replaced by optimism.

The violence arose when the Bureau of Indian Affairs, in the face of declining enrollment, threw Intermountain open to students of more than two dozen tribes, a after a quarter century of catering exclusively to the academic and vocational needs of the Navajo nation.

Undermanned and underfunded, Intermountain School opened its doors this fall to more than 700 students—400 Navajos and the rest from a spectrum of tribal and cultural backgrounds.

The result was bedlam.

When the fighting was finally stopped, 10 students had been suspended, and another 125 had gone home on their own or at the behest of tribal leaders and parents. More than 30 had been arrested, and five convicted of misdemeanors.

Today most of those departed students have returned, the peace has held, and the mood is optimistic.

In retrospect, those close to the school see the violence as a result of bureaucratic fumbling, cultural diversity, and simple adolescense.

"The Navajo knows less about other Indians than about whites," says Director of Instruction Nate Zollinger.

"Non-Navajo students are by nature more aggressive," says Ron Frandsen of the chamber of commerce.

"We weren't ready for this year," says Hal Reeder, English teacher and senior class "dad."

Reeder says the BIA's foot dragging before reaching a final decision whether to open the school, politicking by the Navajo-controlled BIA office in Window Rock, Ariz., and pressure from administrators at other western BIA schools to close Intermountain—all of these left the Brigham City school understaffed and short of funds when the 1974 student body arrived.

"We suddenly had 300 raw, unknown quantities," he says

Aggravating the staff's unpreparedness was an uneasy situation spawned by what Reeder calls "the subtleties of cultural rub."

"Indians don't get acquainted that easily," he says. "And there is almost as much rejection of urban Indians by reservation Indians as the urban types reject the dominant (white) culture."

"A lot of people came here this year with chips on their shoulder," says guidance counselor Eugene Kennington. "They took casual remarks personally.

"They would fight over things that normally would not matter at all—that would not matter now."

Police Chief Stephen Studdert, who disagreed with school administrators who said the violence had been exaggerated, now says the school should have "a good, healthy future." He says he anticipates only normal, adolescent problems.

"You take 700 teen-agers from 27 different cultures and put them in the same place, and there's bound to be some problems," he says.

The students themselves seem to believe a series of relatively routine disagreements were blown out of proportion. Some say there were worse fights at the integrated public schools they attended before transferring to Intermountain. The whites agree.

"You'd have more fights if you put the students of two local high schools together," says Frandsen.

He says the community and the student body of Intermountain get along well together, and the town needs the school: "It would have a tremendous impact on the economy if it were to fold."

Zollinger says the school will survive its growing pains, and so will the students. He says he has a waiting list of about 100 prospective students who cannot be accommodated because of inadequate staffing.

Reeder says simply, "Once you've seen Intermountain, you don't want to go anywhere else.

"We'll just have to live through this year as best we can."

One way to get high for games

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — The assistant coach of a police sponsored boys football team was arrested Wednesday on charges of selling marijuana to a 13-year-old player.

Paul Boyle, 21, was accused of selling an ounce of marijuana to a boy who told his father. Sheriff's deputies arrested Boyle when the father sent his 15-year-old daughter to make another purchase from the coach.

Another 1st for Chicago: nation's busiest mailbox

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago, already noted for the world's busiest airport — O'Hare International—and the world's busiest intersection — State and Madison—now has yet another distinction.

Though no records are kept, the U.S. Postal Service says Chicago has the nation's busiest mailbox.

The box —located at the intersection of Madison and Halsted streets —handles 8,700 pieces of mail daily. The load weighs 200 pounds.

The volume is so heavy, authorities said, the box has to be emptied six times a day.

The Postal Service said it was surprised to find that the location of the mailbox is well outside the busy Loop area of the city. However, postal officials say there appears to be a lot of mail from transient traffic at the location.

Grandma Finds a Gold Mine—in Plates!

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — A successful art dealer in this Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with high resale potential.

According to Thomas Gilmore II, president of this dealership, one grandmother of modest means bought one exceptional plate for $25 in 1965 that now sells for $1,050, and purchased another at $10 in 1969 that now brings $245.

Mr. Gilmore says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes." He offers a free report on what to look for, when to buy, what to pay and much more. It even includes special offers on eagerly-sought collector plates at modest cost.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to Bradford Galleries, 145U Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. Because of limited quantities, please mail your request before November 30, 1974.

Arabs pumping money into hotels

NEW YORK (UPI) — Everybody wonders what the oil-rich Arabs are going to put their money into but so far they've given only one solid indication —hotels.

This pleases companies like ITT Sheraton mightily, says Howard (Bud) James, president of the Boston-based chain that now operates all over the world.

"We already have 13 management contracts for hotels in seven Middle Eastern countries and 13 others under consideration," James told United Press International.

The Middle Easterners put up the money and own the hotels. Sheraton manages them and earns a good profit without making a huge long term investment. "The hotel industry is moving in that direction all around the world," James said. "Sheraton still owns about 45 hotels but we have sold off many to real estate investors, retaining contracts to manage them. This gets us out of the real estate business and enables us to concentrate on being first class innkeepers; it also increases earnings."

Hyatt International of Chicago is another hotel company seeking to expand its management operations in the Middle East. It has a hotel in Iran and one in Israel and management contracts for 18 operating hotels and half a dozen others being built around the world.

But what's in it for the Arabs, the Iranians and investors in hotel real estate in places like Hong Kong, the Caribbean countries, Brazil and Europe?

"Long term profit and capital growth in most cases," James said, "but there are other considerations."

He said in most parts of the world, to be an owner or part owner of a prestigious hotel carries with it considerable social privilege and perhaps economic and civic opportunity. In the past, the fly in the ointment was that local investors had to undertake themselves the job of making the hotel pay. Sometimes it paid fabulously but sometimes it lost money needlessly. Turning the management over to a company like Sheraton or Hyatt is the ideal solution.

American hotel companies have stolen a march on the Europeans in landing these management contracts around the world because the European companies were not aggressive enough, James said. But the American firms have to recruit much or most of their operating hotel talent in Switzerland, France and Austria, countries famous for the quality of their local hotels.

Naturally, the eagerness of the American companies to undertake the management headaches on a fee basis has made local capital in all the underdeveloped countries and even in Europe far more ready to invest in new hotels, especially large luxury hotels in prime locations, James said.

He said another interesting trend in the hotel industry is the airlines' rapid push into it, either as owners or managers. Just recently, United Air Lines' affiliate, Western International Hotels of Seattle bought the famous Plaza facing Central Park in New York. Trans World Airlines owns the huge Hilton hotel chain and Pan American World Airways would be in worse trouble than it is if it were not for the success of its Intercontinental Hotels subsidiary.

Fast harvests

Start high rise delta fish farm

OAKLEY, Calif. (UPI) — On paper it shows a profit, but in April developers of the Quimby Island complex will find out if fish can really be raised economically in high rise tanks.

"It was done for chicks, it was done for cattle, and now it will be done for fish," said Quimby Island general manager Max Mortensen of his mass merchandise approach to marine culture.

The quasi-public agency which runs the island has its eye on two mothballed U.S. merchant marine ships with tanks capable of holding more than five million gallons of water. Mortensen said the ships will cost "about $300,000 or $400,000 each" based on the sum total of the value of all the parts sold as scrap.

Mortensen estimates it will cost an additional $4 million to remodel the vessels, refurbish its tanks, and install support systems.

The fish-raising tanks will use special synthetic salt water which is designed to keep growth conditions optimal.

The recycling system would work like this: the island's farm land would be used to raise fish feed; tiny fish would be stocked in the tanks where the fake salt water would circulate and temperatures would be kept at optimum conditions; wastes flushed from the fish tanks would be used as fertilizer for the island's fish feed farm. The tanks would be operated in a way that would allow thousands of fish to be harvested every 30 days.

"In eight months, we can have a pound and a half trout or salmon —pan-fry size, ideal for one person's dinner," Mortensen said, noting that it takes nature five years to produce a salmon of similar weight.

One of the ships would be used for mini-tank stack trays. Each tray would contain the 12 inches of water necessary for raising shellfish, such as prawns or crayfish.

"We may never be able to grow lobsters," Mortensen said. "They take 18 months in our tanks, and it is economically unfeasible at this time to produce them."

One bonus of purchasing the old World War II boats is their living quarters, which can easily be converted into housing units for workers. Mortensen also envisions a day when the ships can be towed, work force and all, to drought-stricken or disaster areas to provide an instant supply of high protein food.

ARTISTS' CONCEPT of Quimby Island fish farm experiment where developers hope to determine if fish can be raised economically in high rise tanks made from moth-balled ships.

Sex films for therapeutic use

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The biggest attraction at the recent scientific assembly of the American Academy of Family Practice was a crowded booth way at the back of the Convention Center.

The display featured sex films —every bit as graphic as "Deep Throat" —that drew turnaway crowds of middle-age, grey-haired doctors and their wives.

But Richard Price, president of Edcoa Productions of Englewood, N.J., the maker of the films, says there are major differences between his movies and commercial films of the "blue" variety.

"The films are exclusively for educational and therapeutic use," said Price, "and they are designed to help doctors and other professionals in the medical field communicate with their patients who have sexual problems."

Persons who rent the movies for an average $35 or buy them for up to $200 must sign a contract with the company stating that they are either doctors, ministers, marriage counselors, social workers, educators or researchers.

Each film is sexually graphic. But also in each are dialogues between the troubled couples, none of whom are professionals and doctors and mental therapists who discuss their problems.

"The doctor using the film can show it to his patients in segments, either over a week or month, depending on what stage the couple is at," said Price. "Then the couples can go home and practice what they see and return to the doctor's office for the next step."

One professional who watched the films, Dr. Edward A. Carlin, a family doctor of more than 20 years from Newark, Ohio, said such therapeutic movies are long overdue.

"I've never seen anything like this before," Carlin said. "We were never shown anything like this in medical school. If we had been, maybe I could have understood the problems of my patients better."

Price, a filmmaker by trade who studied psychology in college, said he launched the movie project four years ago at the urging of his doctor friends.

"In Europe several years ago I came on some well-done illustrated texts on sex that were for the high-school level student," Price said. "When I showed them to some doctor friends, they said they had nothing to compare with them, even in medical school."

Lloyd, Ayala, McVittie outline programs

By L. T. ROGERS
P-B Staff Writer

Three Democrats who shared the same path in campaigning for the Nov. 5 election pledged to continue that same cooperation as they take their seats in the state Assembly, state Senate and U.S. House of Representatives.

Bill McVittie, victor in the 65th Assembly District, Ruben Ayala, reelected to the state Senate, and Jim Lloyd, winner in the 35th Congressional District, said they would retain close communication as they seek to represent valley residents.

McVittie and Ayala, both with Chino ties, and Lloyd of West Covina, were often seen sharing the same podium at political functions and all had desks at a Democratic office in Montclair during the campaign. In addition, many of McVittie's newspaper ads carried Ayala's endorsement.

In a recent meeting, the three discussed such mutual areas as obtaining funds for the Cucamonga Creek flood control channel, including that section of the Foothill Freeway in San Bernardino County in the federal highway system, and measures to fight inflation.

"This district for the first time in many, many years will be served by three people who have similar philosophical leanings and there is absolutely no excuse for any lack of communication on the state and federal levels," declared Lloyd.

"If we are not able to put a team together to serve the residents, then we will have failed in what we are supposed to do. We have a challenge for us to do an outstanding job."

Ayala added that the three not only had good personal communication but they also shared the same party philosophy.

"This is the first time I have been elected with colleagues whom I knew on a personal basis prior to the election. Bill and I will work closer together on the state level. And with Jim at the federal level, he will be as close as his phone."

Ayala added that he expected McVittie to help in establishing a veterinary school at Cal Poly. Also Lloyd can assist in the federal level, he noted.

"Absolutely, "agreed McVittie. "I believe this is necessary."

While noting there were areas of agreement, the three also firmly stated they had their own bills to introduce.

McVittie announced he had the legislative counsel working on four bills he proposed to introduce after being sworn into office on Dec. 2. These include:

—Consolidation of Air Pollution Control Districts of counties within the South Coast Basin into a regional district and also to give members of the state's Air Resource Board permanent four

A DEMOCRATIC CONFAB

Three Democrats elected to represent the valley at the state and federal levels discuss areas of mutual concern as they prepare to take office. They are, from left, Bill McVittie, 65th Assembly District; Jim Lloyd, 35th Congressional District, and Ruben Ayala, 32nd Senatorial District.

Program to help ailing cattle business falters

P-B WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON — Only $1 million in loans to California ranchers has been guaranteed by the Farmers Home Administration (FHA), under the provisions of the Emergency Livestock Loan Act of 1974 and natich-wide participation in the program designed to help the ailing cattle business is faltering.

Even in California, one of the 30 states with ranchers participating, expectations for the program exceed participation.

In July Congress authorized the FHA to guarantee up to $2 billion in loans. Three months after the one-year program was initiated only $76 million is being guaranteed.

FHA sources claim bankers have chosen to handle the loans without the guarantee and are only asking federal guarantees on loans they would not ordinarily carry.

In California only 13 loan applications have been sent to the FHA by bankers and less than one-half of those have been approved for guarantees. The remainder are still being processed.

Six loans have been processed and guaranteed in California by the FHA for a total of $901,568.

Nationally $76.7 million in loans have been guaranteed and another $66.2 million is pending, according to A. Donald Hanson, acting director of the Farm Production Loan Division of FHA.

Under the provisions of the Act the FHA will guarantee 80 percent of a loan, but offers no break on the interest rate charged.

According to Hanson, the amount of interest paid on the loans, which can go as high as $250,000 per individual, is decided by the banker and the borrower.

The loans are made on a three-year note and may be renewed up to two years.

The act expires July 25, 1975.

Traffic mishaps drop dramatically

Twenty-seven persons were injured in 21 traffic accidents in Claremont during July, August and September, a dramatic drop from 41 hurt in 30 mishaps during the previous three months.

The city didn't record a fatality during the summer period, after two persons were killed in accidents during April, May and June.

The total accident rate was down to 60 for the quarter, after police filed reports on 69 for April, May and June, 68 for January, February, and March, and 74 for the previous three-month period.

Indian Hill Boulevard, down to two travel lanes south of Foothill Boulevard, accounted for 19 accidents, with Foothill Boulevard, the city's busiest thoroughfare, second with 11.

Officers handed out 2,173 tickets, a huge drop from 3,238 for July, August and September of 1973.

Drivers received 793 moving violations, including 469 for speeding.

Officers gave out 1,136 parking tickets, either for violating the two-hour parking limit in the Village business district, or the overnight parking ban throughout the city.

Police Chief Charles Lines reported a 14 per cent increase in "calls for service" during the past three months, with 4,110 calls compared to 3,613 for the first quarter of fiscal 1973. He said that 3,001 were handled "in the field," while the rest were assigned report numbers.

Lines also reported that the police department had finished its first three months in its new headquarters on Bonita Avenue, and that the contrast to the operation at the old station on Second Street is "indescribable."

"The new surroundings, though still unfamiliar to some," Lines said, "promote a more professional approach to our tasks."

Lines commented that completion is still pending in two areas: All furniture has not been delivered yet, and he trusts that things will "smooth out" even more as personnel becomes more familiar with the "system."

YMCA, police sponsor bike race at Collegiate School

Volunteers from the policemen's association for several weekends cleared the land of brush and rocks, leveled and shaped the course into something which would challenge the youngsters. The course includes turns, jumps and a water hazard.

The racing is open to both boys and girls, but if any girls are interested in participating in an all-girl Powder Puff Motocross, they should contact the YMCA at 621-4010.

The YMCA may hold the all-girl race if enough interest is shown.

As protection in case of spills, riders should wear long pants and long-sleeved shirts, and all must wear helmets.

Participants may register at the YMCA office, 130 N. Indian Hill Blvd. or at the race course. More information on the program may be obtained by phoning 621-4010 between 1:15 and 5 p.m. through Friday.

Sign-ups the day of the races will start at 9 a.m.

The competition is open to children 8 and older. Participants will be grouped as follows: 8 to 9, 10-11, 12-13, 14 to 16, and 17 and older

Board to study budget options for cut income

Review of the 1975-76 Claremont Unified School District budget options is on the school board agenda at the district Education Center tonight at 7:30.

The board has held two workshops to gain views of teachers, principals and parents on how to handle the district's educational program in the light of less financial support coming from the state.

The board will receive a list of nominations of persons who might serve on the district's school facility use task force.

The board again will adopt a resolution stating the district's intention to sell the Garey Avenue school site.

A report will be received from R. S. Kirkendall, district superintendent, on a meeting of Claremont Mayor Bertye Smith and other city officials and Kirkendall.

The city and school district had agreed to meetings several times a year to review problems affecting both agencies.

Non-smokers to get discount for household fire coverage

Farmers Insurance Group of Companies is now offering a discount on fire insurance to California non-smoker home owners and tenants. The announcement was made by Joseph Scarminach, local district manager for the company.

The discount will be available for all fire policies in households whose permanent residents have been non-smokers of cigarettes, pipes and cigars for the past two years.

Scarminach added that according to his company's figures "smoking and matches are the apparent cause of six per cent of the dollar cost of all California homeowners' losses."

Farmers Insurance Group of Companies pioneered the non-smoker auto policy in California and was also one of the first companies to offer lower life insurance rates to non-smokers.

Opinion

Inflation? There's no stopping it

President Ford and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns have finally done it. They've tightened the cinches so tightly that capital goods orders—the last prop for the economy and the one hope for easing shortages and putting a damper on prices—appear to be in for a setback. It is clear we are in a recession likely to get considerably worse before it gets better.

Some of Mr. Ford's advisers are known to believe that a recession is preferrable to inflation. But the policy they are promoting, it appears, will give us the worst of both worlds.

Economists predict 7 per cent unemployment and a rough row to hoe for most of us in the months just ahead. The situation is expected to be so bad by January that pressure will be great for Congress to vote major sums for emergency public service jobs, extended unemployment payments and for a variety of programs aimed at providing jobs and getting housing and other lagging industries going again.

If analysts have the election winners pegged correctly, the Congress which takes office in January will have more men and women sold on the necessity of heavier domestic government spending and even more leery of tax boosts and cuts in the federal budget. But whether they are big-government spenders or cut-the-spending conservatives by nature, the temptation to spend us out of the recession will be great indeed.

Though the worsening recession will likely pull inflation down a few percentage points, the relief will not be great and probably will not last for long if economists are correct.

The expected slug of congressional spending bills—a shattering $310 billion budget and a staggering deficit—all calculated to get the country moving, will most assuredly drive inflation up again as industry competes for the scarce materials needed to meet rising demand.

Because of the tight reins Messrs. Ford, Nixon and Burns have put on the economy these past months, the shortages will be greater and the inflationary pressures thus more compelling than if the producers and processors of the basic raw materials and components had been permitted to expand as they had planned.

The renewed vigor of this inflation will bring strong pressure in the Senate and House of Representatives for price controls. Of course, past experience would seem to indicate controls works only for short periods and are accompanied by distortions in production which drive prices to even greater heights when the controls are lifted.

An inflation caused by scarcities can be cured in the long run only by upping production in key industries and on the farms. But controls, if successful, usually hold down production in the essentials and encourage increased output of offbeat and specialty items, where profit margins are greater. Shortages are thereby intensified and the upward pressure on prices increased.

Recessions mercifully have a way of curing themselves eventually—though sometimes at terrible cost, a cost sometimes magnified by the curious solutions governments sometimes attempt. The possibility seen by some economists here is that the tide will turn before the end of 1975. That recovery when it comes, will be accompanied by a resurgent inflation greater than we have today. In fact, there are men in the economic community who are convinced we are not likely in this decade to see inflation drop below 5 to 6 per cent a year at best.

Putting new life in old porn

The porn is no longer green. In many parts of the country, revenues at dirty-book stores, hard-core movies houses and even topless night clubs and massage parlors are a third of what they were a year ago, reports Newsweek.

The reason seems to be the one that many predicted would come into operation when and if pornography became freely available. Commented a movie theater owner in San Francisco, as quoted by the magazine:

"I suppose the general population gets bored with porn after a while. I know I do."

Fortunately — for the pornographers, that is — forces are at work to revive the ailing smut industry. In community after community, prosecutors are taking advantage of less liberal Supreme Court interpretations of obscenity and are cracking down on the dirty books and movies. In the last election, voters in Oregon okayed what is probably the severest obscenity law in the country.

If the reaction continues, the forbidden fruit, grown stale with familiarity, may become enticing again. The censor has always been the pornographer's most valuable ally.

Answer not in denying funds

I wish to reply to Mrs. C.I., whose letter was published in your newspaper on Nov 12. She says that a "No" vote on Proposition QQ meant "shape up." She complained that Pomona schools do not give children a sound education and do not prepare students for college.

How can the schools provide a sound background where there is not enough money for materials? The school district didn't ask for tax money for extras — it was to be used for basic necessities — books, library and counseling services, and smaller classes.

Since the tax override failed, her 4th grade son will be in a larger class and also will have no opportunity for taking the remedial reading or math work he might need. She can expect morale on the high school campuses to worsen instead of "shaping up," since many programs such as band and orchestra, drama and possibly sports will face massive cuts. Most advanced courses will be eliminated, leaving college-bound students at a great disadvantage in fulfilling admissions requirements.

I agree the schools should shape up, but a No vote on another tax election, possibly planned for next spring, will mean there will be, again, no opportunity for them to shape up.

I wish that Mrs. C. I. and others who feel like she does would visit the schools and see for themselves how hard it is to learn when you often have to share a falling-apart book with three other classes, and when you don't have the right chemistry textbooks to go with the lab manuals. Perhaps then these people will realize that the answer to the problem is not in denying money to the schools, but in supporting them and helping to make them better. — Beth Stern, Diamond Bar, Ganesha High School student.

Students who care

We are students at Pomona High in an advanced composition class who are concerned about recent letters in your column criticizing the schools in Pomona.

We feel that you have the wrong interpretation of our school. Our campus is filled with, in the vast majority, students who care. Most of the students at our school work hard to gain an education, to live peaceful lives, and to demonstrate brotherhood.

We would like to invite any interested citizens of this school district to Room 40 to visit Mrs. Jacqueline Ossko's classes any day, any time. We would like you to see what Pomona High School is like actually. — Leah Butler, Debbie Navarrette, Tina Venable, Marcia Burenko, Ruben Watkins, Kevin Ware, David Dill, Susan Weaver, Barbara Anselmi, Cindy Wagner, Myra Bullock, Sam Weaver, Samuel A. Witnesses contradict postal chief

WASHINGTON — Postmaster General Ted Klassen's claim that he had nothing to do with two lucrative contracts awarded to his friends has been flatly contradicted under oath by ex-postal officials.

Astonished by the gap between Klassen's public but unsworn statements and those of the sworn witnesses, House Postal Facilities Chairman Charles Wilson, D-Calif., probably will summon Klassen to Capitol Hill.

Here is how the case developed:

The bluff Klassen, who had promised to bring speed and integrity to the Postal Service, has steadfastly maintained that he knew nothing about a controversial $64,000 contract to study the insurance needs of postal employes.

The contract was awarded in 1973 to the Martin E. Segal Co. As it happens, Klassen had already thrown a fat finder's fee to the Segal Co. on a different postal contract and, significantly, had accepted a $22,917 payment from the firm. This payment came while Klassen was on the Postal Board of Governors.

At issue before Rep. Wilson was whether Klassen, despite his denials, had known about the $64,000 contract, which came after he accepted the $22,917. The FBI is now looking into whether this may have constituted a bribe. Segal's president, Bob Paul, said Klassen was well aware of the insurance contract.

Under questioning, Paul swore that Klassen had personally told him to drop in on postal contracting officer Robert Eidson and chat with him about the contract. In the sophisticated world of federal contracting, a suggestion by a Cabinet-level officer to an underling like Eidson is almost an order.

Sure enough, after two meetings with Paul, Eidson wrote an evaluation heartily recommending the Segal firm. Bids were solicited as required by federal law, but the $64,000 bonanza went to Segal even though two other companies had bid lower.

When Eidsen was called to the witness chair, he contradicted Paul and sought to rehabilitate the credibility of Klassen, an old crony from their American CAN Co. days. At first Eidson said he had not seen Segal president Paul since the early 1950s.

Then, as the committee listened incredulously, he confessed he had met twice with Paul while the contract was on the fire, but denied that he and Paul had talked about it.

Unfortunately for Klassen's credibility, however, a zealous postal contracting employe named Joe Jacques questioned the unusual award. He was swiftly shushed by a superior who told him that "political and management pressures" were involved.

Jacques also testified that he had seen and distinctly remembered a memo on the contract, a copy of which was marked for Klassen, the man who claimed he knew nothing about the deal. The memo has now mysteriously disappeared.

Klassen's veracity suffered another setback when the House committee looked into his dealings with another old friend, public relations man Charles Burnaford. The Postal Service had given Burnaford sole source contracts totaling over $800,000.

When the story broke, Klassen roared that he was "appalled," ordered an audit of the contracts and pleaded that he knew nothing about the details of the contract.

Former post office executive James Holland, now a deputy White House press secretary, testified, however, that Klassen gave Holland the advice that Burnaford would be a good choice for various communications projects.

Another witness, former postal contracting chief Conrad Trahern, has also disputed Klassen's statements. Trahern swore that Burnaford complained to him about Klassen's calls at all hours of the day and night.

Trahern, a former FBI agent, also swore that his boss, Gen. Robert McCutcheon, called him shortly after the Burnaford story surfaced and darkly suggested that he get rid of any files that might be embarrassing to Klassen. Trahern refused. McCutcheon denied the charge, also under oath.

Subcommittee chairman Charles Wilson is now considering referring the many apparent perjuries committed at his hearings to the Justice Dept.

Klassen has vowed to fight. He's hired a personal lawyer, who sat in on the Wilson subcommittee hearings. Klassen may need him, since Wilson and his subcommittee are expected to call on him to explain the many discrepancies in his public statements.

Harnessing the new superpower

There is a power ready and able to re-energize planet earth, a pollution-free force greater than that of atomic energy, and from what Congress just did it appears we're going to get going on the development and use of that superpower.

Some stories are too big to synthesize, but I'm going to try. Nuclear fission involves "splitting atoms." Nuclear fusion involves "putting atoms together," fusing them.

Combining the nuclei of hydrogen atoms is essentially the way the sun works. Fusion is the source of all light and heat throughout our solar system.

Fusion was first made to work on earth in 1952 when a hydrogen-fueled thermonuclear device was demonstrated at Eniwetok. From that day scientists have dreamed of harnessing that awesome force for peaceful purposes. It would be an inexhaustible supply of clean fuel.

In lay language, we've needed a "container" for it. Fusion-force at 100 million degrees is too hot to handle. And so far we have found no way adequately to confine the hot ionized gas.

Half a hundred universities in the United States, and others elsewhere, are seeking ways of confining the hot plasma within magnetic forces. Congress has invested half a billion of your dollars in this magnetic confinement concept.

Recently, a new process—not magnetic confinement—has begun to emerge as more promising. The process is classified, but this much can be said: It employs a laser to achieve fusion.

Laser technology is less than 15 years old. The word is a string of initials for "light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation."

Congress has now replaced the Atomic Energy Commission with two new agencies, one of which is to explore nine optional energy sources including a specific fusion project.

Our Atomic Energy Commission does not expect useful application of fusion energy for 30 more years.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), in the interest of accelerating development, is urging less secrecy. Since 1969 a company in Ann Arbor, Mich., has been developing the laser-fusion concept but this effort, also, is hamstrung by the secrecy which Sen. Symington criticizes.

Obstacles notwithstanding, this I now know: The laser has been successfully employed to generate neutrons through implosion of pellets of deuterium and tritium.

In the judgment of our most conservative scientists, this is an exciting prospect. Dr. Robert Hofstadter, professor of physics at Stanford, Nobel laureate in physics, says, "Fusion applications for commercial energy may be attained in the next 10 years."

Just in jest

There's a lot of talk about TOGETHERNESS being what the world needs most these days. And if that be true, I'd say we were well on our way toward achieving our togetherness goal. In fact, a government authority on population trends claims that if the current rate of world population growth holds, in 700 years there will be one person for every square foot on the face of the earth. — And how much more together can we get than that?

How did the older folks react to such pearls of youthful conversation embellishment as, "Ish-ka-bibble", "Twenty three skidoo", and "I love my wife with all my life but oh you kid"?

Jackson's dream just a nightmare

Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson was having a restless night. It could have been brought on by the hors d'oeuvres served at a party fund-raiser he attended a few hours before. Or maybe it was a sixth political sense, trying to tell him something . .

Unaccustomed as he was to White House news conferences, President Carl Albert stood before the assembled national capital press corps in what could only be described as a state of shock.

It had all happened so quickly, so unexpectedly. Why had the new President's friend, Jerry Ford—who as House minority leader was always such a good sport about being harassed by the Democratic majority—suddenly turned hostile?

I mean, talk about dirty tricks! Turning in that letter of resignation was about as sneaky as you can get. All right, so maybe Albert, in a rash moment back on election night, 1974, had referred to a Democatic "mandate."

But he didn't mean that he and his fellow Democrats ought to be given the responsibility that goes with a mandate.

True, thought Albert, Jerry might have some slight cause for irritation. His vice presidential nominee, Nelson Rockefeller, was still under investigation by a Democratic House subcommittee, six months after his name had been sent to Capitol Hill. But, after all, Jerry, of all people, should understand that the legislative process takes time.

Then, of course, there were those 17 ambassadorships, 12 federal agency vacancies, 42 postmaster nominations and five U.S. Army promotions to second lieutenant sent over by the Ford White House, all still awaiting Senate approval. Not to forget the delay in congressional ratification of a presidential proclamation declaring Dec. 25 a legal holiday.

And, oh yes, one other minor item; that hold-up on Ford's sixth choice to be Federal Energy Administrator, a nomination challenged by Sen. William Proxmire on grounds that the nominee, a Benedictine monk, had failed to inform the Senate that in pre-monastic life he had owned not one but three gasoline credit cards.

But even so, thought Albert as he nervously awaited the first question from the press, Republican Presidents are expected to put up with such inconveniences in their dealings with Democratic Congresses.

Jerry just wasn't playing by the rules. Now he was running around the country telling folks that since the Democrats didn't want to work with a Republican President, let 'em try one of their own. Put up or shut up—until 1976, that is.

Dirty tricks, President Albert muttered to himself, just plain Republican dirty tricks. "Mr. President," Roger Mudd was asking, "about the country's economic crisis—"

"Oh, yes, the economy," replied President Albert. "Well, we're sending that problem over to committee to see what they come up with."

"Mr. President," someone called out from the back of the room, "what are your administration's plans for dealing with the new threat of war in the Middle East?"

"That's a serious matter," answered the President, shaking his head dolefully. "We hope to get around to it right after the Christmas recess."

Meanwhile, at the opposite end of Pennsylvania Avenue, the mimeograph machines in the press offices of Sens. Jackson, Mondale, Kennedy and Muskie had fallen silent, for the first time in years. And on the floor of Scooop Jackson,'s inner office, two alternate speech drafts were scattered, exactly where he dropped them when news first came of Jerry Ford's resignation.

One draft blamed Ford for failing to intervene in the Middle East. The second draft, stamped "For Use if Needed," blamed Ford for intervening in the Middle East.

Down the street, Marty Nolan of the Boston Globe was asking Carl Albert another question: "Mr. President," Nolan said, "now that the country has a Democratic White House and a Democratic Congress, I'd like to ask you a question about busing . . . "

Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson woke up in a cold sweat. He turned on his bedside light, reached for the phone, and dialed the number of a Senate colleague. "Mike," he said, "about that Rockefeller confirmation. Isn't there some way we could hurry it along?"

Victim draws attention to new petty theft line

A new racket has been pulled on me. I think it should be brought to the attention of unsuspecting and kind-hearted housewives.

Two girls came to my door on a Monday morning. One of them asked to use my phone to call her boyfriend to have him bring her gym clothes to school.

I let them in. I was washing and folding clothes and didn't pay too much attention to time until I suddenly realized it shouldn't take so long for the call to be completed.

It occurred to me that the girl was making a long distance call. She assured me she wasn't.

My hunch was right. When the phone bill came it showed two calls, one for 5 minutes and one for 15 minutes, to El Monte.

The $1.75 this experience cost me is not a large sum but what that girl did is no less than stealing. — Mrs. G.M., Pomona.

Your experience with strangers is a first in Action Line records.

Usually the expensive phone call offenders are relatives or "friends."

Although I have often patronized mail order firms, I have never been disappointed until now.

Last March I ordered a dwarf banana tree. When I wrote to ask why it hadn't arrived, I received a note in June from Home Decorator Service in Westport, Conn. It stated there would be a "short delay" due to "unusual circumstances beyond our control."

I would still like to receive the banana tree. Failing that, I'd like my money back. — V.P., Claremont.

Our letter to Home Decorator Service was returned with a note that your money was refunded five days after we wrote.

Your letter of thanks made us feel positively top banana.

FOLLOW-UP:

Last April we published a letter from two brothers who were searching for two younger sisters and a brother they hadn't seen since 1947.

As two of the missing trio were born in Fort Smith, Ark., we wrote to a fellow member of the Donrey Media Group there asking for help in the search.

That newspaper, the Southwest Times Record, wanted more information and sent a series of questions to the brothers in Pomona, Jesse and Gene Jesttes.

We would like to be able to say that the combined efforts of the Record and Action Line resulted in a family reunion.

It didn't work out quite that way. The brothers didn't know the answers to the Record's questions. They let the matter drop.

But there was a reunion last month. One of the sisters in Arkansas was hoping simultaneously that she could bring the two branches of the family together.

She put a classified ad in the Record. It was read by a cousin who knew the addresses of the Pomona brothers. A phone call led to the reunion, in Arkansas.

People at the bank where I have a checking account informed me that the computer had made a mistake.

It gave me $49.70. Later I was told that the money had been taken back.

That was all well and good. But then I was told that the computer had taken more than just that amount and nobody could find the mistake.

Can you look into this? — E.R., Upland.

The bank representative we talked with said that you had first called the error to her attention and it was corrected.

Another member of the staff didn't know about the correction and "corrected" it again, leaving you short. But that error also was corrected.

She said you and the bank were even. Since it wasn't clear to you, an appointment was arranged for you and the bank representative to go over the records together. This worked out satisfactorily.

Facing 470 more of hubby's affairs makes wife's life seem dreary affair

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When a woman wrote and asked how many times a wife should forgive a husband who cheats, you quoted the Bible — Matthew 18:21-22. Peter asked Jesus, "How often should I forigve a brother who sins against me? Seven times?" Jesus replied, "No. Seventy times seven."

Does that mean I should forgive this rat 490 times? If so, I've got to live through 470 more affairs. I don't think I'll make it. Any advice? — No Martyr.

, Dear N. M.: You took me too literally, dear. I'll tell you now what I should have said when the other woman wrote. Every woman whose husband cheats should ask herself this question: "Would my life be better or worse without him?" She should then do what is best for her, because there is no blanket solution to this one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm the wife of a clergyman and have been tempted to write many times, always on the same subject. After what happened today, I decided to put it off no longer.

My husband spent several hours doing premarital counseling for this couple I will call Albert and Amy. Last night was my birthday but my husband couldn't attend the small party given by my sister because he had to be at the wedding rehearsal. This afternoon the wedding took place.

After the ceremony, the groom called my husband aside and asked, "What do I owe you?" My husband told the young man that he does not charge fees. The reply was, "How wonderful of you to be so generous. Thank you very much!" Like many others, the young man didn't realize he owed the clergyman something even though there was no set fee.

The groom and his parents are financially well off. The wedding was one of the loveliest this town has seen. Wouldn't you think the parents would know better, if the groom doesn't? Please answer in print for the benefit of ALL clergymen who have this problem. — Their Name Is Legion

Dear Friend: Usually the groom or his best man hands the cleryman an envelope following the ceremony — or, if there is no envelope and the groom asks, "What do I owe you?" the clergyman should have a figure in his head and not be ashamed to let it come out of his mouth. I know of no professional person who works for nothing, when the client can afford to pay, and I don't see why a clergyman should be expected to.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is in response to "No Fan Of Yours," the parent who felt your column should be removed from the newspaper because you spoke out on such subjects as homosexuality and V.D.

I'm a boy, almost 16. I've read your column since I was nine years old. My parents never told me one thing about sex or anything connected with it. It was from reading your column that I learned most of what I know.

I want to thank you, Ann, for helping me (and thousands of other kids) to grow up to be more mature and responsible. God bless you. May you continue to do your good work for many years to come. — Joe G.

Dear Joe: Thank you for one of the nicest letters I have ever received. I plan to keep on doing what I'm doing until my typewriter or I fall apart — whichever comes first.

Confidential to A Worry Wart Who Needs To Get It All Together: A big worry will drive out the small ones. And seeing as how there is always a still bigger worry coming along (you can count on it), tell yourself to be thankful for the small worry you now have and count your blessings.

Movie throws Rice Owls for a loss

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

A whimsical item out of Little Rock, Ark., hit the nation's newswires last week: The football team of Rice University lost to Arkansas because the Owls were upset by a movie they had seen the night before the game.

In my whimsical career I have lost games and matches in a variety of sports and I have come up with excuses you wouldn't believe — and no one else did, either — but it never occurred to me to blame the movies.

Seems the Rice gridsters went out on the town to "get their minds off the game" but the only movie they could find was "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre," an inept and gory violence exploitation film. Better they should have had their minds on the game.

"It was gross," said Rice punter Mike Landrum. "It made me sick. About half the team walked out on it. I couldn't sleep a wink all night long."

Still heavy-lidded at game time, Landrum dropped the ball in the end zone, leading to an Arkansas score. The Razorbacks went on to win 25-6. The movie should be rated CSG — some coaching staff guidance advised.

The Arkansas players could sympathize with their defeated opponents. The previous week the Razorbacks all viewed "Andy Warhol's Frankenstein" before their game with Texas A & M, and lost the next day 20-10.

Coaches should pay serious attention to what sort of silver screen stimulation their young charges are exposed to on the night before a crucial game. Maybe in addition to head coach, backfield coach and line coach, each squad should carry a movie coach who would screen movies in advance and screen out those not deemed suitable for impressionable 240-pound football players. Their bodies may be big, but their brains are not, and they may be too upset to sleep after seeing some horrific Hollywood gem.

Sophomores on the squad should be limited to Walt Disney movies, with an occasional nature film or "The Sound of Music" if the boys are mature for their age. The juniors would move up to grimmer stuff — John Wayne movies, Alan Ladd re-releases, or something like "Love Story," guaranteed to have them asleep before they leave the theater. For the senior members of the team the coaches might permit "The Sting" or "The Poseidon Adventure."

Some time, just for the heck of it, the coaches ought to turn the kids loose on some hard-core porno flicks the night before a game.

Watch out next time, you Razorbacks!

THE DOCTOR COMMENTS

Lack of stamina has many causes

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column you advised a small lady to build some muscles. How do you do that? I am past 50, 5-foot-4 and only weigh 107, but have no stamina.

I exercise faithfully but it gets no easier. If an exercise says to start out with five times and build up to 100 times, six months later I am still only able to do about 20 and each one is just as hard to do as the first week that I did it. I have no weight problem but have had a protruding tummy all my life and no exercise does anything about reducing it.

DEAR READER — Your lack of stamina may be related to other factors besides the size of your muscles. Lots of small people are able to go and go, never seeming to tire.

There is a difference in repeating and repeating an exercise, which we call endurance exercises, and those that build muscles, which we call strength exercises. A long distance runner repeats the same movements over and over. A weight lifter may lift the weight only a few times, he rests, and at regular intervals in his training the amount of weight he lifts is gradually increased.

A muscle will only get large enough to lift the size of load it is asked to lift. If your arms are not used to lifting heavy objects, moving them rapidly will not develop large or strong muscles.

There are numerous ways to load a muscle to make it work harder and harder, thereby enlarging and gaining in strength. Weight lifting is one example.

Many people do get some benefit out of contracting opposing muscles, the isometric exercises. You can demonstrate this by holding your arm out, then tensing all the muscles in the arm so the arm and fist are rigid. Hold it a few seconds and relax the muscles. Repeat the exercise.

I prefer that these exercises be combined with muscle movement. You can do that by holding the arm fairly rigid and then, while the muscles are tense, moving the arm by bending the elbow and various movements. By moving the muscles while they are tense you put the stress on different muscle fibers and help to produce enlargement or increased strength in a more uniform way throughout the muscle.

You can use this same principle for almost any muscle in the body. You can do it with your legs and thighs. The combination of contracting and moving the muscles is a combination of what exercise specialists call isotonic and isometric exercises. The isotonic exercises are those that involve movement.

You can do voluntary muscle contractions of the abdominal muscles, including the lower abdominal muscles, while lying down, sitting or standing. You can also do leg lifts for that lower abdomen. Finally, don't forget posture. A lot of people would not have as much problem with the abdomen if they would just learn to hold their chests up and not compress the abdomen. With the chest and shoulders up, rather than slouched, and a conscious effort to hold the stomach muscles in, the problem is not so marked in many instances.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of the Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on losing weight, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for the "Losing Weight" booklet.

'Hip' talk about waist measurement

Young lady, if your hip measurement is exactly nine inches greater than your waist measurement, you can consider yourself in pretty good shape. If eight inches or less make the difference, you're either straight-hipped or thick-waisted. And if the difference amounts to 12 inches or more, your center of gravity is low. Too low. Far too low. Or so an expert on the matter reports.

WHEN ORDERING turtle, as when ordering chicken, you can ask for the light meat or the dark meat . . . If you're normal, your tongue will start to get smaller at about the age of 65, I'm told . . . Credit Cheyenne, Wyo., as the whereabouts nationwide in the last 40 years of the most hailstorms.

JAPANESE

Q. "What does 'Nigo' mean in Japanese?"

A. That's No. 2, the label put on a girlfriend, not his wife, of a married man there, providing he keeps that girlfriend in cash. However, if she is one of those modern young things willing to play without stipend, she's identified as a "Zerogo" meaning zero.

A QUICK THINKER was Roger Williams, the founder of Providence, R.I. About to leave England for America, he proposed marriage to his childhood sweetheart. She said no way, not to go out there to live with the Indians. As he wended his sad way out of her parents' palatial home, he encountered the family maid. Why not? He promptly proposed to her. She said by all means, or words to that effect. The record shows they lived happily in matrimonial harness until her death in Providence.

GOLDFISH

First woman in France to own a goldfish was the renowned Madame Pompadour.

THAT FAMOUS Indian rope trick originated in China, not in India. And stunt men in Germany performed it 200 years before it caught on among the Indian tricksters.

WHAT, YOU had a bad day this week, young fellow? Forget it. You know what old Somerset Maugham said: "Only the mediocre man is always at his best."

NOTE IT CLAIMED in print that husbands start approximately 12 per cent of the quarrels among the married. Our Love and War man calls the contention ridiculous. Husbands start at least 15 per cent of all matrimonial quarrels, he says.

SCENIC VIEW — Clear weather in Northern California provided this artistic view of the first snow of the season recently on the slope of towering Mt. Shasta.

N.Y. archive can prove good old days 'terrible'

NEW YORK (UPI) — A unique firm in New York with a sales volume of only $1 million a year has become virtually indispensable to the publishing and advertising industries.

It's the Bettman Archive, started as a hobby 50 years ago by Dr. Otto Bettman, a refugee German scholar known principally as a compiler of reference books on the arts and sciences.

The archive is a collection of three million pictorial artifacts —photos, line drawings, cartoons, posters, woodcuts and the like catalogued under 5,000 headings and rented out to advertising agencies, publishers, packaging houses and researchers. On Madison Avenue they now have a saying: "If you can't afford Norman Rockwell, you can always get Pieter Breughel the Elder from Bettman's."

Bettman has been called on for jobs ranging from producing all the pictures for a 15volume encyclopedia to a single antique woodcut for an advertisement or a box label. And he has had some really novel requests: "Can you send us a picture of a fist making a speech?" or "Send us everything you've got about apples."

He also has had some requests he can't fill—for a drawing of Thomas Jefferson eating spaghetti, for instance, or a portrait of Gabriel Fahrenheit, inventor of the mercury thermometer.

He has a standing offer of $500 to anyone who turns up a usable picture of Fahrenheit.

There are other collections of pictorial artifacts as big as Bettman's. The Library of Congress and New York's Metropolitan Museum have them but they're not catalogued like Bettman's "and they don't have me as their computer memory bank," Bettman chortled. Part of his great value to his customers is his remarkable memory of the things he has bought over half a century. He started collecting as a boy in Germany, where he followed an academic career. He's a rich man today and says with grim irony: "I owe my financial success to Adolf Hitler. He forced me to flee Germany and become a business man as well as a scholar."

Bettman has written a book about his collection, "The Good Old Days —They Were Terrible" (Random House, New York, Nov. 25).

In it he asserts crime, political corruption, the economic situation, employment, education and all social conditions were much worse in the 19th Century than they are now. "And I've got the pictures to prove it."

For example, he has drawings to show street traffic was worse in the horse drawn age in American cities by far than it is now. "Horses caused ten times as many hit and run fatalities then as automobiles cause now," he says.

He says the housing shortages in the big cities were worse then. "In 1875 nearly half of all New Yorkers lived in terrible slums."

Drug addiction was worse in 1898 by far than now. Cough medicine then often contained heroin. Adulteration of milk and other foods, which creates an uproar when the perpetrators are caught nowadays, was common practice then, he adds.

Players give 'selves away

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim: "I regret when you told me once that it was possible to watch a man play just one hand and know that he was a good player."

Oswald: "I think I put it the other way. Watch one bad play and know that he isn't good."

Jim: "Maybe it works both ways. In any event I watched a young player handle today's four-spade contract. He ruffed the third heart and proceeded to play out his ace and queen of spades."

Oswald: "That was certainly a good start. Most players would have retained the last of the three high spades in their own hand. After that the 4-1 trump break would have led to a two-trick set, provided East ruffed in on the third diamond."

Jim: "It became obvious that South knew what he was doing. He didn't even pause when West showed out on the second spade lead. He just started on diamonds and let East trump in when he wished."

Oswald: "To forestall some mail, West could have shifted to a club at trick three and spoiled South's party, but that does not reflect at all on South's excellent play."

A safflower is a thistlelike plant with large flowers that may be white to brilliant red. The plant grows about 3 feet high and has broad, spiny leaves.

The safflower has been grown in China, India and in other dry parts of the world for many hundreds of years.

At one time, people used the dried flowers of this very useful plant to make a red dye called carthamin which was used in making rouge and for dyeing silk and cotton fabrics light red.

Today, safflower is grown mainly for the oil obtained from its seeds. Because the oil does not yellow with age, it is used in making paints and varnishes.

Most of the oil, however, is used in the preparation of such foods as margarines, cooking oil and as a salad oil.

The oil is also used in diets for persons with heart diseases and certain other illnesses.

The meal, made from the crushed seeds, is fed to livestock.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

BING'S BABY — Since she became Mrs. Bing Crosbe in 19 . Kathryn Grant Crosby has raised three children into their teens, earned a nursing degree and a teaching degree, written a book and played roles at a community theater. The former beauty queen, newspaper columnist and actress now has a live morning television talk show in San Francisco.

Kathryn Grant Crosby

Crooner's wife too busy to fret about role of mate of superstar

By ART McGINN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The wives of famous men often pay heavily for their stature, it has become increasingly evident, but Kathryn Grant Crosby is too busy to notice.

Married at age 23 to singer Bing Crosby 30 years her senior, the onetime Texas beauty contest winner (real name, Olive Grandstaff) was first a newspaper columnist and then Kathryn Grant in the movies.

Since she became Mrs. Bing Crosby in 1957, she has raised three children into their teens, earned a nursing degree, a teaching degree, written a book, helped hold together a private college in Los Angeles, acted part time in live theater here and now has her own local television talk show.

The half-hour Kathryn Crosby Show started in late August and airs weekday mornings, aimed at the housewife.

Guests range from movie stars to Gloria Steinem to hair transplant experts to people who talk to their begonias. And even strippers such as Carol Doda.

The show wasn't her idea.

"They asked me —I hadn't thought about it," she said of the local Westinghouse station (KPIX). The offer came while she was playing small parts in live theater.

"I never really left working, never felt that I was really out of the business. I worked in summer stock and did any play I wanted to.

"Bing has always been very good to me about this. He's always wanted me to do the things that are important to me. I was offered a TV show in Los Angeles 10 years ago but it would have been impossible to leave the family at that stage."

Bing is much happier with the new television career than the theater parts that often brought her home late at night.

"I used to wake him up when I got in around midnight, and he didn't like me driving alone at night," she says.

"We're both morning people, and the show is perfect for that. I work in the mornings."

Her show format is more interview than interplay. She has tended to stay in the background, letting —or hoping to let —the guest carry the ball. This is as it should be, she believes.

"It's a new thing for me, asking the right question at the right time. In a way I guess I approach a subject a little like an investigative journalist: I'm really interested and I want to know. But I hate to ask the piercing question. I really don't dig conflict. I want people to feel free to open up. I want to be the interested friend, to show I care. But I talk too much when I get nervous. Some viewers have complained about it.

"I stew a lot over what I should have said or asked. It's hard for people to come on a show. There's no pay for it. The camera is like a truth serum. Barbara Walters says doing a TV show (as a guest) is really a terrible ordeal."

Kathryn Grant is the wife of a famous man. But, she says, "He's a very special man.

"He's as exciting as his fans think he is. He's the same off screen as on.

"Marriage is a one-to-one relationship and I think it has to stay that way. I think each couple has to work out their own arrangement. When we were married, he said, 'Of course, you can go on working' and he meant it. I suspect he thought I'd tire of it after a while but I didn't.

"We had a long courtship, four years. I think if it had gone only three years, I would have been more dependent. In the fourth year, I learned I could get by on my own and that was very important to me. I am very grateful."

"I am for women's liberation —and grateful for those who stuck their necks out. I see it as an expression of the right of women to keep growing, even when they're married and mothers. The objective is to continue to use their intellects, without guilt.

"I think if women learned early that they can support themselves and can live by themselves, it'll be much healthier afterward. And they'll find more interesting husbands."

Does she feel any need to compete with Bing?

"There's nothing I could do that could threaten him," she said, laughing.

Mehta missing

Philharmonic plays Claremont concert

By RALPH PIERCE

Subscribers to the concert series of the Claremont Colleges were in for several suprises at the Wednesday evening concert of the Los Angeles Philharmonic in Bridges Auditorium.

After noticing that a different concert master came out on the stage, we heard over the P.A. system that Zubin Mehta had been hospitalized for "minor emergency surgery" and that the concert would be conducted by the concert master and assistant conductor, Sidney Harth.

On short notice and with probably little, if any, rehearsal time. Harth did his best to hold things together with a performance that lacked the luster and enthusiasm which Mehta is generally able to invoke. Harth decided against tackling the problematical Schoenberg Variations for Orchestra and substituted a work by Messian, "Les Offrandas Oubliees" and the Variations on "America" by Ives as orchestrated by William Schuman. The Messian provided the best playing of the evening as the orchestra responded with some beautiful effects in the mystical-impressionistic style of this contemporary French composer. The Ives work, originally written for organ, shows the humorous side of the composer and was delivered in a light mood.

The opening "Rienzi" Overture found the orchestra and conductor trying to catch their balance and it was sort of a "pot boiler" that didn't quite come to a boil. The program closed with the Dvorak Symphony No. 7 and, after a somewhat unsteady first movement, it settled down to some very nice music making. Although it could hardly be classified as one of the great works of its period, it contains generous spoonfuls of the Bohemian romanticism for which Dvorak is famous.

Judging from the accolades from the European music critics on the flyer that was distributed with the program, the L.A. Philharmonic is an orchestra that relies on the charismatic control of their young conductor. We can only hope that he can be on hand for its next appearance here.

Fisher plans workshop on theater arts

Richard Fisher, veteran professional actor and director, will offer the second session of Valley Community Theater's theater education workshop at the theater, 132 E. Third St., Pomona, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The workshop sessions are open to the public at no charge and are sponsored by VCT, Pomona School District Adult Education, and the National Endowment for the Arts. The topic of this section will be "An Open Forum on acting and stage technique."

Fisher appeared as Henry II in VCT's 1972 season production of "Lion in Winter" which he received the best acting award, and directed the musical comedy hit "Little Mary Sunshine," during the same season. Currently he is appearing as Socrates in "The Gadfly of Athens" at the Theater of Arts, Los Angeles.

Fisher's acting and directoral credits on the community theater level have been supplemented by extensive professional credits in movies and televsion. He served as resident director of Bakersfield Community Theater from 1968 until 1971, where he also ran his own private acting academy.

Enrollment in VCT's drama workshop, which will be running throughout the season featuring various resource personnel of the local theater group, is open to the public.

Future sessions will be in theater lighting and sound, stage craft, set design and directing. Further information about the workshop on Tuesdays and Thursdays, VCT's current production of "Fiddler on the Roof," or its coming attraction, "Charlie's Aunt," can be obtained at 622-6954.

year terms so they can't be dismissed if they disgree with the governor.

—Consolidation of Municipal and Superior courts. "I believe it is inefficient to have two separate trial court structures. We end up with a great deal of plea bargaining. Even if we do not reduce costs, we will make the judges more readily available to hear cases, which is a bottleneck now."

—Voter registration where citizens can register by postcard. There is "mass apathy" now as was seen during the last election, he added. In the 65th Assembly District, 45 per cent of the eligible voters weren't registered. "And the present system of trying to find deputy registrars is inconvenient," he said.

—Transferring minor traffic matters to the Department of Motor Vehicles. These should be considered as civil matters and minor traffic cases should be taken out of the courts and given to the Department of Motor Vehicles, which could handle these more efficiently and at a less expense.

Ayala said much of his legislative proposals would result from recent questionnaires sent to residents in the 32nd Senatorial District. "We had a tremendous response indicating what people felt should be done." He wants to assess the information before deciding on legislative measures.

The senator, however, noted three bills he would introduce. They are:

—Creating a school of veterinary medicine, hopefully at Cal Poly Pomona. "That would be the logical location. I have veterinarians who support this."

—Provide legislation that would allow voters to elect school board members by districts. Such a proposal has been requested by some residents in San Bernardino, who claim they can't get representation on the school board he explained.

—Provide traffic referees with larger scope of responsibility. They are now restricted in their actions and need more authority, he said. "If it involves sentencing, then the matter has to go to the judge."

Lloyd said the most important legislation will involve the matter of economics at the federal level.

"There is no question that we are in a recessionary period. We will address ourselves to the economic problems that are present." He said President Ford's economic policies are devasting. "He does not have a good grasp on the situation."

The congressman-elect also reported he would be concerned immediately with getting his office set up to deal with problems that citizens may have with the Veterans Administration and Social Security and also appointments to military academies.

Regarding areas of local concern, the three pledged to work together in getting funding for completion of the Cucamonga Channel to prevent a repeat of the 1968 floods where seven persons were killed and millions of dollars of damage done.

Ayala recalled the U.S. Corps of Engineers had recommended the project years ago and that Congress had approved the work but failed to appropriate necessary funds.

McVittie added there was no organized opposition and the three would work with other California congressmen to get funds allocated. "With the strong need for this, there is no reason why appropriations can't be made and the project completed within the next two or three years."

Ayala noted a problem in the past was the lack of state legislators supporting the project in Washington. When the funding matter comes up again, the senator offered to assist Lloyd by appearing before Congress to testify on the need

Regarding the Foothill Freeway, the three expressed optimism that the route would be completed to Redlands. At present the freeway receives federal funding for construction only to La Verne where the interstate status ends.

Lloyd reported he wasn't well briefed on the freeway, adding there seem to be some "hangups" on the route. Eventually, he said, those systems of highways will go through with necessary monies being appropriated.

Ayala said he had recommended in Sacramento six months ago that the Foothill Freeway extension be given a high priority to replace any other projects delayed.

McVittie said he believed the freeway would be completed since federal funds are plentiful now. "Part of that freeway system is federal highway and I don't see why the balance can't be deemed an extension of that federal highway. It only makes sense."

McVittie reported one of his early concerns as an assemblyman may be the selection of an Assembly speaker.

"I am convinced that Leo McCarthy will continue to do a good job. He has cut down the number of committees from 26 to 19. He will sponsor a program of progressive legislation."

Ayala added there may be a fight for the office of Senate President pro-tempre. Sen. George Zenovich of Fresno is outlining a program to replace James Mills of San Diego, he said.

"I am not committed to anyone at this time," Ayala noted.

Regarding committee assignment, McVittie said he would seek placement on the Assembly's judiciary, revenue and taxation, elections and reapportionment and agriculture committees.

The reasons for selecting these are his proposed programs for court consolidation and revising the voter registration procedures, and his background as an accountant.

Lloyd said he would seek appointment to the armed forces committee because of his 21 years service as a Navy aviator and also the space and aeronautics committee because of the number of these firms in his district

Ayala presently serves on the revenue and taxation, agriculture and water, local government, natural resources and wildlife committees.

In addition, he is on a select committee on statewide education goals and evaluation.

In his new term, Ayala said he would consider appointments to the finance, insurance and financial institutions, local government, civil disorders and prison reform committees.

U.S., Russ cooperate on artificial heart

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American and Russian scientists working together to develop an artifical heart?

"Fantasy," said Soviet Health Minister Boris Petrovsky, not so much at the idea of U.S.-Soviet scientific cooperation, which surely would have been considered fantasy only a few years ago, but at the idea of a man-made heart itself.

"Who would have imagined it," said Petrovsky who met during a nine-day visit to the United States with heart surgeon Michael DeBakey. The two doctors signed a formal work plan to implement the joint artifical heart agreement.

"To think that in the future, in man's breast, an aritifical heart will beat," he told U.S. reporters. "It is some far future. But even now models of artifical hearts are keeping animals alive."

Nor are artifical hearts the only pursuits of cooperating medical scientists from the two countries. Cancer, environmental health, arthritis, influenza and acute respiratory diseases also are on the agenda.

The U.S.-USSR. agreement on cooperation in the field of medical science and public health was signed at President Nixon's Moscow summit on May 23, 1972. To expedite the exchange of scientific information, a Moscow-Washington health "hotline" was started Sept. 7, 1973.

But the agreement went much farther than that. Scientists have been exchanged; joint scientific meetings held; joint laboratory and clinical research projects undertaken; drugs, medical devices and equipment, viral agents and other biological materials and publications have been sent back and forth.

To be sure such increasing scientific cooperation is bound to encourage sceptics at home and abroad who wonder if "we" or "they" aren't giving away something.

American officials argue that health, like music, transcends political and geographic barriers. Heart disease, for example, is a major killer in both the United States and the Soviet Union.

Petrovsky, the guest of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Casper Weinberger during his late October visit, met the question without being asked.

He said that when he is home, Soviet journalists ask if their scientists aren't giving the Americans too much information about Soviet knowledge of artifical hearts.

And when he is in the United States, American newsmen wonder if American scientists aren't giving away too much information.

"I think that our agreement is a very important link in the long-term prospects for detente and friendship between our great peoples," he said, sitting beside Weinberger at a news briefing.

Chiding American reporters for what he said was inadequate coverage of the joint agreement, Petrovsky said:

"We expected to have more information on the successes achieved under the joint agreement. In the Soviet Union we inform our people many times more broadly (about the research project) than is done here.

"But I think this is easily remedied."

Investigations leading to creation of an artificial heart will help solve broader medical problems, the two leaders predicted. Neither do the two superpowers intend to try to corner the market on the fruits of their biomedical research, they said.

During the Weinberger-Petrovsky talks, both reaffirmed their desire to share the results of the collaboration with international organizations, especially the World Health Organization.

First Lady doing bit for 'WIN'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford has promised to fulfill her pledge to fight inflation by buying non-designer fashions, wearing them more than once and cutting back on the style of White House parties.

Both Mrs. Ford and her husband particiapated in a ceremony Wednesday in which they signed the first consumer pledge to fight inflation, part of President Ford's "Whip Inflation Now" or "WIN" campaign.

Mrs Ford later confided to reporters that she wore an old dress to a White House dinner Tuesday night for Austrian chancellor Bruno Kreisky. "It wasn't new, she said. "I can put on my WIN button."

She added that she had been thinking how she could curb spending on her wardrobe. "I like clothes," she admitted. "But I think I can do it without designer" labels.

In the future, she said, White House parties will be "keyed to the problem of inflation."

"However," she added, "I think the world has to go on, but we can do it with more consideration of costs. I think that we can do very glamorous and elegant things without having it so expensive."

WATCH OUT!

John Block of the Chicago Bulls appears about ready to crash into Lakers' Brian Winters (L). Camera angle is mis-leading and Block, the former USC star, galloped by to score. Bulls won, 96-76.

Lakers hit bottom

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

INGLEWOOD — Two records were set at the Forum Sunday night.

The Lakers had their lowest point total ever in a regular-season game since the team moved to Los Angeles from Minnesota. That goes back 14 years and 1,066 games. Their lowest total in all games was 72 in a playoff game with Milwaukee April 9, 1972.

The low-scoring Chicago Bulls became the third team to blow the Lakers out in the first quarter at the Forum this season. The Chicagoans won an easy 96-76 game as the Lakers dropped their sixth game in the last seven they've played.

The home court advantage is not proving to help the Lakers any. They now have dropped six out of 10 at home. Last year they won 30 of 41.

This was what prompted the second record, a personal one for coach Bill Sharman. He kept the doors locked to the press for 33 minutes after the game. That is his personal high with the Lakers. But when he was coaching the ill fated Los Angeles Stars (in the ABA), he once locked the doors for 52 minutes.

"There's not much I can say," Sharman muttered glumly when he did appear. "We were bad in all areas tonight. We didn't shoot and we didn't play defense. We had a team meeting afterward. The players agreed that defense is the number one priority. So we'll concentrate on that this week."

Sharman has another team meeting scheduled before practice Tuesday and said he has asked for a meeting with the club administration to discuss the poor start and any trading possibility that might open up.

Those present at the meeting, in addition to himself, would be general manager Pete Newell, owner Jack Kent Cooke, assistant coach John Barnhill, Director of player personnel Larry Creger and assistant general manager and broadcaster Chick Hearn.

Whether anything can be done at this state of the season is uncertain, but it is obvious the club will explore every possibility.

Sunday's game was a weird one. The Lakers went 5:38 midway through the first quarter without scoring a basket. They hit on only six of 22 shots (27.3 percent) for the quarter and scored just 14 points, tying their season low.

Meanwhile the Bulls hit on 14 of 23 (60.9 percent) to take a 33-14 lead.

In the second quarter, the Bulls missed their first eight shots and didn't score a point for the first 4:09. At the end of the period, they went 5:34 between Chet Walker's 15-foot jumper and Jerry Sloan's 18-foot turnaround with just two seconds remaining in the half.

There were no free throws and no team fouls in the second quarter. This is believed to be a first in NBA history.

The Bulls scored only 12 points in the period, but the Lakers popped in only 18. The Chicago forwards, Walker and John Block, outscored the Laker forwards, (Pat Riley, Happy Hairston and Connie Hawkins) 21-4. Block had 11 points (all in the first quarter) Walker had 10. Hairston and Hawkins had two points each. Riley did not score.

Although the Lakers cut the lead to 13 points, 45-32 at the half, The Bulls outscored them in the third quarter (29-24) and in the fourth quarter (22-20). The Chicago lead got as high as 27 points in the third quarter.

"They looked like a fast-breaking team tonight and they don't even have a fast break," groaned Sharman. "It was one of those games where everything went their way."

The crowd, announced as 12,417, booed the Lakers' erratic play frequently. As usual the Lakers turned the ball over way too often . . . 28 Sunday night for a total of 58 in the last two games.

"Turnovers are killing us," Sharman said, "and when we're shooting bad on top of it, whew."

For the game, the Lakers shot 39.2 percent (33 of 84). They even managed to miss 12 of 22 free throws. Gail Goodrich was the top scorer for Sharman's club with 21 points. The next high was reserve Stan Love who played only 15 minutes and scored 13 points.

Walker (23), Block (21) and Jerry Sloan (18) had 62 points between them. Nate Thurmond scored only six points but had 18 rebounds and eight assists.

Saints catch Rams off guard in upset win

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — New Orleans Saints Coach John North has come up with a new offensive set that may not change pro football but was good enough Sunday to throw the division-leading Los Angeles Rams off guard

Early in the first quarter of the 20-7 upset, North called for the new set which used only one running back and four receivers.

It paid off. Archie Manning hit wide receiver Bob Newland with a 79-yard scoring pass, the longest of the season for New Orleans.

"I knew they had charted everything we've done, so we felt we had to come up with something new," North said. "That formation gave Los Angeles a new look with some different people in some different positions, running some different plays."

"We've got some more options off of it but let's not talk about those yet."

Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox, however, said his squad was not deceived, but was simply outplayed.

"It wasn't a new look that beat us, we just didn't block, we didn't tackle and we fumbled the ball," he said.

The Rams fumbled six times, losing three of them in a game that could have clinched their second consecutive NFC Western Division title. The loss left Los Angeles 7-3 and gave second-place New Orleans at least a mathematical change of catching the Rams with a 4-6 record and four games remaining.

"We made mistakes in the first quarter and we didn't get any points on the board," said Lance Rentzel, Rams wide receiver who had four catches for 87 yards. "They scored and then played with more enthusiasm as the game went along. We didn't play our best. They just played a hell of a good game."

Knox, in his second year as coach of the Rams, said his squad had not gone to New Orleans overconfident.

"There was no problem—we just got the hell kicked out of us."

Sun is back in playoffs (it says here)

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

The World Football League revised its playoff schedule for the fourth time Sunday and the Southern California Sun is back in, at least as of this writing.

The Sun (13-7) will host the Hawaii Hawaiians (9-11) Thursday evening at 6 p.m. The Florida Blazers (14-6) host the Philadelphia Bell (8-11) in the other game.

Under the latest setup, both Memphis (17-3) and Birmingham (15-5) draw byes this week.

The winner of the Sun-Hawaiians game will play Birmingham in the semifinals next week at a site to be announced. Likewise, The Bell-Blazers winner will play Memphis.

The World Bowl will be held Dec. 5 pitting the winners of the two semifinal games against each other for the title.

The Sun has been shut out of all national television unless it can go all the way to the championship game. The latest announcement said the only playoff games not on national television will be the Sun-Hawaii game this week and the winner of that game versus Birmingham the following week.

Memphis owner John Bassett criticized the confusion in the latest revamping of the playoffs. But Bassett failed to note that the original schedule called for the three division championships and one wild card team to participate.

The first revision expanded it to the three division titlists and three wild card teams. Next it was expanded to include five wild card teams, eliminating only two of the remaining 10 teams in the league.

Last Friday Sun general manager Curly Morrison, apparently acting on his own without consulting anyone else, telexed the other teams urging cancellation of the playoffs because he claimed all teams would lose money.

Saturday the league announced the third revision which completely ignored division champions and took the three teams with the best won-lost record. Sun owners objected saying Morrison had no authority to speak for the team.

Pac-8 ends up normal way

By United Press International

The Pacific 8 Conference football race has come down to the point everyone expected even before the first tackle was made this Fall—Southern California against UCLA.

The Trojans, who have played the last two Saturdays the way coach John McKay had expected them to from the first game, routed Washington, 42-11, Saturday while UCLA took care of Oregon State, 33-14.

That left the two Los Angeles powerhouses a game apart in the standings with the big one coming up this Saturday in the L.A. Coliseum.

A Southern Cal victory would give the Trojans the title outright and earn them a spot in the Rose Bowl for the third straight year and the seventh time in the last nine years.

A UCLA victory would leave the Bruins tied with the Trojans and the winner of the California-Stanford match in Berkeley for first place, but the honor of playing in the Rose Bowl would fall to UCLA.

That's because California is on NCAA probation and Stanford would have only a 5-4-2 overall record compared to the Bruins' 7-2-2. UCLA and Stanford played to a 13-13 standoff in their regular-season meeting.

On form and their past record in big games, the Trojans undoubtedly will be favored to beat the Bruins but in a game such as this sometimes form and the odds are discarded —at least going in.

"We certainly won't be overconfident," says UCLA coach Dick Vermeil, who is in his first year at the UCLA helm. "My club has overcome all kinds of adversity this year. Many of our players have been hurt but we've become an extremely tight-knit and battling group."

"I expect the game with UCLA to be a dogfight," is the way McKay put it. "We played pretty good against Washington but I still think we can play better."

Michigan and Ohio State will be battling for the Big 10 title a few hours before the start of the Southern Cal-UCLA game, and their objective is the same —to win a Rose Bowl berth.

California and Stanford both won their games last Saturday by way of getting ready for their so-called "Big Game" this Saturday. Cal, behind another outstanding performance from Steve Bartkowski, held on to beat Washington State, 37-33, and Stanford parlayed the running of Scott Laidlaw and its best defensive effort of the season into a 17-0 triumph over Oregon.

Anthony Davis, as he has been season long, was Southern Cal's offensive hero. The 5-9, 183-pound tailback improved his credentials for Heisman Trophy consideration by rushing for 147 yards in 29 carries against Washington. That made him the first three-time 1,000-yard rusher in Pac 8 history and left him only 10 yards short of O.J. Simpson's league rushing record of 3,423 yards.

Russell Charles scored two of UCLA's tds against Oregon State and the Bruin defense held the Beavers off despite a 342-yard passing offense.

Bartkowski, who is being boomed for all-America honors, didn't hurt his chances one bit by completing 21 of 30 passes for 304 yards. It was the second straight game in which he has passed for more than 300 yards, and his season total is 162 completions in 280 attempts for 2,262 yards and only six interceptions. Despite his play it took a fumble recovery by linebacker Rick Booth with 1:30 left to play and WSU marching in for a touchdown to save the victory, which gave Cal an overall mark of 7-2-1, its best since 1968.

Ron Cheatam rushed for 194 yards and quarterback Chuck Peck, whose fumble denied the Cougars victory, added on 137 as WSU ran for 442 yards in an awesome performance.

Laidlaw ran for a single-game career high 142 yards and the Stanford defense held Oregon to 138 yards total offense as the Cardinals rebounded from a 35-10 plastering by Southern Cal.

League champion San Diego State whipped New Mexico State, 35-14 for its seventh victory in nine starts to feature play in the PCAA. In the other games, San Jose State routed Fullerton State, 49-8, Pacific beat Wyoming, 50-14, Fresno State downed Wichita State, 24-12, and Long Beach State edged Western Michigan, 34-33.

In games this week, San Diego State meets Bowling Green, San Jose State plays Southwestern Louisiana, Long Beach State meets North Texas State, Fresno State takes on Hawaii and Fullerton State plays UC Davis. Pacific concluded its season in the victory over Wyoming.

Seven area grid teams enter CIF

A total of seven valley teams have been accepted to the post-season CIF football playoffs, which begin this weekend.

Three teams from the San Antonio League will be competing. Due to a four-way tie for second place in the league, the CIF asked for two of those second-place teams. So the league principals met this morning to decide which two of the four will go.

The league picked Upland and Claremont as the two representatives, by virtue of a draw of names. Ganesha and Damien lost the bids.

Pomona High, which won the league championship for the second consecutive year with its 17-13 win over Montclair Friday night, will host Mission Valley League runner-up San Gabriel this weekend.

Pomona head coach Mike Clifton has been trying to schedule the game to be played at Mt. San Antonio College either Thursday or Saturday night. He was scheduled to confirm the date sometime today.

Claremont is scheduled to face Freeway League co-champ Santa Ana Valley Friday night at 8 p.m. in the Santa Ana Bowl, with Upland also traveling to battle Foothill League champion Burroughs of Burbank at a site and time yet undetermined.

Bonita High, Hacienda League champ after going through the season with only one loss, will play host to San Andreas League runner-up Norco Friday night at 8 p.m. on the Bonita High field.

Royal Oak, runner-up to Bonita in the Hacienda, will take a long road trip to battle Desert Valley League champ Calexico.

San Dimas was one of the third place teams chosen to fill the seven at-large berths in the 2-A playoffs. The Saints finished third in the Hacienda, and will face No. 1 ranked El Dorado Friday night at Valencia High.

Rowland, the Montview League champ, will host the Orange League's third place team, Canyon, at Mt. San Antonio College Friday night.

Undefeated Loyola was the No. 1-seeded team in 4-A competition, and will open against Santa Fe in the first round.

Monrovia was seeded No. 1 in the 3-A, while El Dorado got the top draw in 2-A.

Bowl invitations look premature

By United Press International

A few of those premature bowl invitations are beginning to look awfully embarassing to the hosts.

The Sugar Bowl committee, for example, was ecstatic a couple of weeks ago when it announced it had invited Florida and Nebraska to compete in the New Year's Eve classic at New Orleans. At the time it looked like a sweet matchup as both teams were ranked high in the top 10, but now the committee is a bit red-faced.

The reason is the sudden demise of eighth-ranked Florida, which has lost two games in a row—the latest a 41-24 whipping by Kentucky Saturday.

The Fiesta Bowl is another which may have acted a bit hastily in setting its pairings. The committee invited Oklahoma State two weeks ago and the Cowboys might be lucky to escape the season with a winning record. Colorado dealt Oklahoma State a 37-20 beating Saturday and the Cowboys are now only 5-4 with games against Iowa State and unbeaten Oklahoma remaining.

Another bowl invitee, Texas Tech, also was beaten Saturday as Baylor handed the Red Raiders a 17-10 loss. Texas Tech, now 6-3-1, will be meeting Vanderbilt in the Peach Bowl at Atlanta on Dec. 28.

There are still seven spots open in the 11 major postseason bowl games and all but two berths should be filled by next weekend.

Next Saturday, Michigan meets Ohio State and Southern California takes on UCLA to decide the Rose Bowl pairings and Brigham Young only has to beat lowly Utah to clinch the Western Athletic Conference and a spot in the Fiesta Bowl.

Tulsa, which has clinched the Missouri Valley Conference, looks to be the logical choice to oppose Miami (Ohio) in the Tangerine Bowl and Tennessee, if it can beat Kentucky Saturday, looms as a good bet to meet Maryland in the Liberty Bowl.

That would leave only open spots in the Cotton and Gator Bowls, and both hinge on the outcome of the Southwest Conference race. The winner of the SWC automatically qualifies to meet Penn State in the Cotton Bowl with the runnerup set to meet Auburn in the Gator Bowl.

Right now it's a three-team race between Texas A&M, Texas and Baylor, and it won't be definitely decided until Texas A&M and Texas meet on Nov. 29.

All three SWC rivals won Saturday, with Baylor's victory eliminating Texas Tech from title contention. Texas A&M, ranked No. 9 nationally, whipped Rice 37-7 while Texas humilifted Texas Christian 81-16.

In other games involving the top 10 teams, No. 1 Alabama defeated Miami (Fla.), 28-7, No. 2 Michigan crushed Purdue 51-0, No. 3 Ohio State whipped Iowa 35-10, No. 4 Notre Dame nipped Pittsburgh 14-10, No. 5 Auburn squeaked past Georgia 17-13, No. 6 Nebraska whipped Kansas State 35-7, No. 7 Southern California routed Washington 42-11 and No. 10 Penn State topped Ohio University 35-16.

Oklahoma, unranked because of its probationary status, and Yale, unranked because the coaches obviously don't appreciate Ivy League football, both kept their perfect records intact with easy victories. Oklahoma, 9-0, crushed Kansas 45-14 and Yale, 8-0, downed Princeton 19-6. Alabama and Michigan are the nation's only two other unbeaten-untied clubs.

Richard Todd tossed for two touchdowns in Alabama's triumph, Dennis Franklin threw two TD passes in Michigan's rout, Champ Henson scored three TD's to highlight Ohio State's victory, Tom Clements passed for one TD and scored the decisive one in Notre Dame's win and Phil Gargis rushed for 154 yards to spark Auburn's triumph.

Also, David Humm passed for two TD's in Nebraska's victory, Anthony Davis became the No. 1 scorer in Pacific Eight history with a pair of TD's in Southern California's triumph, Steve Campassi scored twice to highlight Kentucky's upset, Bubba Bean had two TD's in Texas A&M's victory and Tom Donchez tallied three times in Penn State's win.

Oklahoma's triumph was sparked by quarterback Steve Davis, who passed for one score and ran for two more, while Yale got two touchdown runs from captain Rudy Green to defeat Princeton and clinch at least a tie for the Ivy League crown.

Pomona drivers qualify in top four at Ontario

Pomona drivers Bill Spencer and Bill Osborne qualified Sunday second and fourth for next Saturday's Permatex 200, which is part of the race weekend that features the first running of Ontario's NASCAR 500 Grand National race.

Driving Pomona Truck Electric-sponsored 1964 Chevelles, Spencer qualified behind Ivan Baldwin with an average speed of 142.691 miles per hour while Osborne settled in behind San Diego's Ron Esau, averaging 142.438 mph.

Baldwin, the leading driver at the 605 Speedway in Irwindale this year, piloted his 1968 Chevelle to an average speed of 145.883 miles per hour to grab the pole position.

Other area drivers who qualified were Hacienda Height's Lonnie Pebworth (fifth), Bob Forester of Montclair (19th), Ed Ash of Azusa (40th), La Puente's Les Cooper (45th), and La Puente's Carter Johnson (46th).

Qualifying for the Grand National cars will be Friday afternoon and Saturday morning at Ontario.

Rogie Vachon earns award

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Log Angeles Kings' goalie Rogie Vachon has been selected as Southern California's Athlete of the Month for October by the Citizens Savings Athletic Foundation.

Acquired from the Montreal Canadiens by the Kings in November of 1971, the 5-7 Vachon—the smallest goaltender in the NHL—has a 1.25 goals against average and a 7-1-4 record for the Kings this season.

After 18 games, Los Angeles leads the NHL's Division 3 with 26 points on a 10-2-6 record.

Rodgers leads Montreal to win

MONTREAL (UPI) — Johnny Rodgers caught a fluke pass in the opening quarter Sunday as the Montreal Alouettes defeated the Ottawa Rough Riders 14-4 to advance to the Grey Cup game next Sunday in Vancouver.

The Alouettes, winners of the Eastern conference final, will meet the winner of the Western Conference final of the Canadian Football League Championship for the first time since 1970 when Montreal last captured the Grey Cup.

Dolphins return to top spot with old heroes, new faces

By United Press International

It took 10 weeks but the Miami Dolphins are back on top.

The World Champions moved into first place for the first time this season Sunday and they did it with a mixture of old stars and new faces as they erupted in the final minute for a thrilling 35-28 victory over the Buffalo Bills. Miami and Buffalo entered the game tied for first in the American Conference East and now the Dolphins lead by one game with four to go.

The old heroes were quarterback Bob Griese, wide receiver Paul Warfield and fullback Larry Csonka and the new star was reserve fullback Don Nottingham.

Griese completed 11-of-18 passes for 237 yards, four of them going to Warfield for 139 yards, including a 49-yard touchdown pass. Csonka, playing on a painful swollen ankle, blasted for TD runs of two and six yards and Nottingham, the "Human Bowling Bowl" ran for two last period scores to win the game for Miami.

Nottingham, a squat 5-foot-10, 210-pounder called on when Csonka couldn't continue, ran 11 yards for one TD to give Miami a 28-21 lead and after Buffalo tied the score on Gary Marangi's five-yard TD pass to Bob Chandler, he ripped 23 yards up the middle with 19 seconds left for the winning score.

"It's the makings of the men involved," said Miami Coach Don Shula, who has held his club together this season despite numerous injuries. "Griese's tremendous poise, Warfield's skill, the tenacity of the offensive line."

Griese took over at the Miami 19 with 51 seconds left and marched the Dolphins to the winning touchdown in just four plays. He threw 31 yards to Warfield and Jim Kiick put together runs of 12 and 15 yards to the Bills' 23. Nottingham roared up the middle on a draw play and scored untouched.

"I don't get surprised by holes like that any more," Nottingham said. "You get used to seeing that kind of daylight with the offensive line we have."

Miami surged to a 14-0 lead on Csonka's touchdown and Griese's pass to Warfield and Csonka's second TD after Joe Ferguson scored for Buffalo left Miami ahead 21-7 after three periods. But they combined for five touchdowns in a wild fourth quarter that saw the Dolphins boost their record to 8-2 and drop Buffalo to 7-3.

Dave Washington returned Mecury Morris' fumble 42 yards for a Bills TD and Marangi, replacing the injured Ferguson, threw a 44-yard pass to J.D. Hill, who made a diving catch in the end zone to tie the score at 21-21. Nottingham put Miami ahead, Marangi tied it and then Nottingham won it.

This has been the year of the upset and it continued Sunday. Houston upended Cincinnati for the second time this year 20-3, the New York Jets toppled New England 21-16, New Orleans stopped Los Angeles 20-7, Green Bay tripped up Minnesota 19-7 and Baltimore beat Atlanta 17-7. In other games, Pittsburgh beat Cleveland 26-16, Washington held on to beat Dallas 28-21, Oakland defeated San Diego 17-10 and St. Louis dumped Philadelphia 13-3, Detroit edged the New York Giants 20-19 and San Francisco bombed Chicago 34-0. Kansas City is at Denver tonight.

Oilers 20, Bengals 3

Willie Rodgers scored twice on one-yard runs and the Oiler defense stymied Cincinnati to carry Houston to its fourth straight victory. Dan Pastorini also threw a 22-yard TD pass to Ken Burrough for Houston, now 5-5 afer winning

Two hat tricks highlight New York's 10-0 rout... big deal!

By United Press International

Inflation being what it is, getting a hat trick just isn't the same these days in the National Hockey League.

Despite a full house in New York, for example, only an odd hat or two greeted Rick Middleton's four-goal performance Sunday night when the Rangers routed the California Golden Seals, 10-0.

"Nobody wears hats anymore, it seems," Middleton said later. "And those who do wear them don't want to throw them away."

If Middleton's first big-league hat trick didn't receive the customary display of haberdashery, the blond rookie does have a more powerful aide if he desires attention. This ally is Derek Sanderson, who may have the most glib tongue in hockey and was one of the first aboard the Middleton bandwagon.

"I told you guys in training camp Middleton was going to be the Rookie of the Year," Sanderson said Sunday night. "I knew it the first time I saw him. The first time I played with him in a scrimmage, he scored five goals. He's just a natural with a feel for the game. He plays the same on bad nights as he does on the good ones."

The 20-year-old Middleton beat goalie Gary Simmons with all four shots he took on net, scoring two goals in each of the first and third periods to boost his club-leading total to 10. This despite the fact that he spent most of the early part of the season on the bench.

"I was dejected because I wasn't playing and I was getting out of shape," Middleton said. "It didn't bother me that much when we were winning, but when we were losing I felt I could contribute. It was the first time in my life I was sitting on the bench like that."

Two other games on the night's schedule also resulted in shutouts with the Buffalo Sabres beating the Atlanta Flames 4-0 and the Pittsburgh Penguins beating the Washington Capitals 6-0. In the only other NHL action, the Boston Bruins turned back the Detroit Red Wings 5-2.

Sabres 4 Flames 0

Roger Crozier, making only his fourth appearance after being sidelined for nearly a year by a pancreas illness, handled all 25 shots Atlanta directed at him. Craig Ramsay, Gil Perreault, Rick Dudley and Jerry Korab scored Buffalo goals.

Penguins 6, Capitals 0

Gary Inness, with 26 saves, registered his first NHL shutout as Pittsburgh evened its record at 7-7-2 and climbed into third place in Division 3. Rick Kehoe scored two goals for the Penguins and Jean Pronovost, Bob Kelly, Syl Apps and Lowell MacDonald had one each.

Bruins 5 Red Wings 2

Bobby Orr scored two power play goals for the Bruins and Phil Esposito had one while Boston was short-handed. Esposito's goal, which proved to be the winner, came at 16:50 of the second period. Nick Libett scored both Detroit goals.

Baylor now 0-1 as coach in NBA

By United Press International

Elgin Baylor took over the coaching duties of the New Orleans Jazz for one game Sunday and picked up right where fired Coach Scotty Robertson left off: explaining why the Jazz lost again.

Jazz President Fred Rosenfeld, disappointed over his team's 1-15 record, will name a permanent replacement today for Robertson, whom he fired Sunday A successful coach at Louisiana Tech, Robertson seemed to have difficulty adjusting to the pro game and relating to his players.

Baylor, a superstar for the Lakers for many years, apparently does not want the responsibility of a head coaching assignment yet and Rosenfeld said he will name a coach "not presently in the Jazz organization and someone who has coached professional basketball."

Several names fit that description such as Alex Hannum, Butch Van Breda Kolff, Jack McCloskey and Roy Rubin—all fired from head coaching positions last year. Rod Thorn, an excellent assistant coach for the New York Nets of the ABA, has also been looking for a head coaching job.

Meanwhile, Baylor was left in the New Orleans locker room following Sunday's 99-85 loss to the Detroit Pistons, trying to explain why the team lost again.

"We ran our offense well in the first half," Baylor said, "but couldn't hit the open shots. In the second half, our offense broke down completely."

If nothing else, Baylor is succinct.

Bob Lanier contributed 26 points and 17 rebounds for Detroit while Pete Maravich led the Jazz with 24 points.

In the only other NBA games Sunday, Chicago whipped Los Angeles 96-76 and Golden State edged Phoenix 106-105.

Warriors 106 Suns 105

Derrek Dickey hit a six-foot jump shot with eight seconds left to provide the Warriors with the winning edge. Dickey's score came after he took the rebound on a missed attempt by Rick Barry, who led all scorers with 36. Following Barry in scoring for the Warriors was Charlie Johnson with 25. Charlie Scott led Phoenix with 32.

The tournament concludes Sunday.

SAL stages cross country finals

There should be an interesting race at Mt. San Antonio College Tuesday afternoon.

The San Antonio League will be holding its cross country finals on the rugged Mountie course, beginning at 3:15 p.m.

Claremont, the 1974 SAL dual meet champion, appears to be the favorite to win the finals championship. The wolfpack already qualified its entire varsity team for the CIF preliminaries by winning the dual meet title.

Other teams which figure to give Claremont a battle include Upland and Pomona.

The individual confrontations should be just as interesting as the team battle.

The favorite to win the race is Upland's Mark Sorenson, with several others figuring to be right in the thick of things.

Claremont will be pulling for its top performers Gary Ardrey and Mark Ramstead. Pomona's threats include Barry Boettcher, Ken Dent and Ed Davila, while Montclair boasts Mike Rosa, Garey supports Steve Trenholme and Chino pulls for Frank Bravo.

Upland is the defending team champion in the finals. However, the Scots had their seven-season dual meet championship string snapped this year by Claremont.

In last year's finals, Sorenson finished second and Boettcher ended up a surprising third.

I'm going to fly you like you've never been flown before.

I'm Linda. And here's how my Triangle Fare works:

First you fly National to Miami or any one of 11 other Florida cities. You can stay in Florida as long as you like. When you're ready to go, we fly you to New York. When you're ready to return home, you fly the airline of your choice to Los Angeles.

If you like, you can reverse the triangle and fly from Los Angeles to New York to Florida and then back to Los Angeles. The choice is yours. And the cost is just $5 more than the regular L.A. to N.Y. roundtrip airfare.

National also has Triangle Fares between Los Angeles and Newark, Philadelphia, Washington and Boston for the same $5 extra.

Add a little Florida sun to your next business trip. With my Triangle Fare, I'm going to fly you like you've never been flown before.

Cheers!
